Naked Human Heart
Root on Contracts
An Unknown Corpse
Invisible Infra Red

—By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright, 1920.)

At Norwich, Ct., where Mrs. Kenyon is on trial, accused of murdering Dr. Tetlow, the human heart walks around all uncovered.

Mrs. Kenyon told what many a woman has thought, but not told, that she was "starving for mental sympathy." Dr. Tetlow, now dead, supplied the mental sympathy for a while.

Mr. Kenyon, who heard his wife's full and complete and sorrowful confession, says, "of course I will take her back."

He asks, "Why is it people think a man unnatural who stands by his wife in trouble, but think a wife fine and noble who stands by her husband?"

To take the place of the missing angle, Tetlow, who was shot out of the "eternal triangle," there is the Kenyon baby, less than a year old. "Grandma" says "he is the image of his father," meaning Mr. Kenyon, and Mr. Kenyon says he is going to stick to the baby also, regardless of Dr. Tetlow.

"Proud man" will laugh at Mr. Kenyon, but should not. To worship one who said "Forgive them, Father, they know not what they do," and despise poor Mr. Kenyon because he forgives the woman who got tired of "one long fight against the desire for things we are told we cannot have," is not reasonable.

Whatever you may think of Elihu Root as the gentleman who teaches the white mice of high finance to walk the tight wire in safety, you must admit that he is an able lawyer and knows the meaning of words written into a contract.

Mr. Root says that Article X of the League of Nations covenant would force us into the wars of Europe.

Mr. Root had a good line also about "getting back constitutional liberty which we suspended for a real war, and are going without because of the existence of a phantom war."

One after another the hunger striking Irishmen, MacSwiney in London and the others in Cork jail, will die. And England, in the excitement of the coal strike, will pay little attention. Many an important issue has thus been overshadowed by another less important. Hold a silver dollar in front of a man's eye and he cannot see the mountain just beyond.

To the graves in Westminster Abbey is to be added another. It will hold the body of an unidentified British soldier, some poor corpse with the face shot away, name not to be known until it is read on judgment day.

The King will be present at the burial of this nameless body, and Kipling, very likely, will wake from the slumber of success to write a poem about it. It's a good subject.

There are proud graves in the Abbey. The finest contains, in one tomb, the bodies of Pitt, who kept Napoleon out of England, and his father, the Earl of Chatham, who did his best to keep King George out of the American war.

Little do their ghosts suspect it, but when, at earth's last day, several million years from now, they all rise and move on, the greatest of them will be as thoroughly unknown as the soldier with his face shot away. And the plow of the farmer and ice from the North will have passed many times over the spot where now stand Westminster Abbey. And the name of King George will mean then no more than the number of the prize winner in today's show of leghorn chickens.

We have in America no Westminster Abbey, but we have an interesting unknown person buried. He lies under the steeple of the cathedral that A. T. Stewart built in Garden City, L. I., and Mrs. Stewart lies beside him.

The real body of her husband was stolen and never found. To pacify the poor widow she was told that a body, of which she never saw the face, was that of her husband. She buried it piously, was buried beside it, and night and day a watchman protects the two corpses. Quite a surprise for both, the widow especially, when they rise later on.

Experts from England, Japan, France, visited the General Electric Works at Schenectady. They saw a motor of six thousand kilowatts with a flywheel weighing a hundred thousand pounds, to be set up in India. The flywheel will supply the power exceeding that of many thousands of men. It ought to make the many thousands richer, happier and freer, but it won't. Where selfishness controls machinery, human beings profit little.

The same visitors saw a device that raises a six hundred thousand candle light to twelve million candle power by conserving hitherto wasted light beams. They heard discussed the use of "an invisible searchlight." It will be made possible by the use of infra-red rays, invisible to the human eye, to be used for sending radio messages for naval purposes, with no possibility of detection.

Twenty-five thousand human beings work in the plant of the General Electric. And in one corner of the brain of such a man as Steinmetz there is more power than in all the work of a million ordinary men.

FLAGMAN SHOT BY GUNMEN

Pullman Passengers, Routed From Berths at Buffalo, Give Up Valuables

By International News Service.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Five bandits early today held up the New York-Chicago train No. 15 of the New York Central Railroad in the yards at Clinton and Bond streets. After shooting George Sinclair, flagman of the train, they boarded the Pullman car and fired three shots.

They ordered all of the occupants out of their berths, and, while two of them covered the passengers with revolvers, a third man searched the passengers and obtained about $160 and personal valuables.

The other two men stood guard over the flagman while their companions were robbing the passengers.

PLEADS TO FREE MRS. KENYON

Attorney Rathbun, in Closing Argument, Calls on Jury for Acquittal

Norwich, Ct., Oct. 21.—"Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone."

Attorney H. W. Rathbun took this as his text today for a powerful and dramatic appeal to the jury which has in its hands the life of Mrs. Mabel Kenyon, on trial for the murder of Dr. Herbert Tetlow.

His moving plea stirred several of the jurors to tears, as he described the struggles of the woman in the dock and the sadness that would be always with her. He asked that they acquit her, and tell her to "go and sin no more."

Attorney Rathbun reminded the jury that Mrs. Kenyon's story of the shooting was the only one in the case.

He said they must accept her claim that she shot her lover accidentally, when she meant to take her own life.

Referring to the doctor's alleged taunts just before the shooting that Mrs. Kenyon had not the courage for suicide, the lawyer said "he came to his end through his own act. He had himself to blame. He forced his attentions on this woman. He refused to let her break their criminal relations. He jibed at her threat to kill herself."

Mrs. Kenyon's lack of bitterness toward the slain physician was recalled to the jury in the course of the appeal.

NUMBER ON RAISED $2 BILL FALLS, MAN HELD

A falling cipher from a $2 bill resulted in the arrest of John Miller, colored, of Marianna street, East Lynn, on the charge of tendering altered paper money as payment for goods at the store of Potter Brothers, Washington street, Roxbury, last night, according to testimony in Roxbury Court today. Miller was held for a hearing tomorrow. Miller bought $3 worth of goods and gave the clerk the altered bill, which was made up to appear like a $20 note. One of the cyphers on the bill fell off, and Miller, it is stated, expressed astonishment. He gave the clerk an extra dollar and left the store. Later he returned for the $2 bill and was arrested.

Elopes With Patrolman

Hayes and his pretty bride, who, before her marriage, was Miss Ethel Kennedy, eloped to New York on Columbus Day.

A city ordinance that waives the five-day law permitted them to be married at once.

They were married by a justice of the peace in the Municipal Building.

They came home last Thursday and were re-married in Saint Leo's Church, by Father Cunningham.

Although her parents knew nothing of the marriage until after it took place, the bride declared she had been engaged to Patrolman Hayes for almost a year and that they had it all planned to be married on Columbus Day.

The young couple will reside at No. 2 Oakville avenue, Roxbury, while "Dan" is looking for new worlds to conquer.

POLICE SEEK BODY OF WOMAN BURIED ALIVE

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 21.—The story told by Mike Chucak that he saw a man bury his wife alive, is receiving wide credence here as the result of the discovery that both the man and woman referred to by Chucak have been missing since Sunday.

Chucak says he was staying at a boarding house kept by a man known only as "Big Mike" when he heard the man's wife scream. Later he saw "Big Mike" at work in a newly ploughed field burying a bundle.

DEMAND 3-CENT NEWSPAPERS

Convention of New England Association of Circulation Managers Urge Price Raise

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 21.—The retail price of daily newspapers should be three cents. This was the consensus of opinion of members attending the fourth annual convention of the New England Association of Circulation Managers, who met at the Hartford Club here.

The price of three cents in the opinion of the meeting would result in the public more nearly paying the cost of production.

C. H. Clark of the Hartford Courant advocated five cent newspapers and H. H. Conland, treasurer of the Courant, said that in spite of general price declines, the production of newspapers is becoming more costly and publishers should face the facts. He advocated a raise in price as a means of adjusting the burden of production.

"No business like the publishing of a newspaper can continue to do business at less than production cost, unless the paper wishes to be entirely in the hands of the advertisers," he stated.

G. H. Reynolds of the New Bedford Standard reported that the increase of from two to three cents in the price of his paper had not resulted in any loss of circulation.

Those present in addition to the above mentioned were: H. R. Bach, Springfield Republican; F. S. Hoy, Lewiston Sun; J. E. Hill, Hartford Times; P. F. Viets, Hartford Courant; N. C. Johnson, Hartford Times, A. F. Doyle, Fall River Evening Herald; H. M. Wheeler, Hartford Times; W. M. Toomey, Hartford Courant; F. L. Nutting, New Haven Journal-Courier; S. J. Moore, Crowell Publishing Company; Roy C. Webster, Hartford Courant; Thomas F. Lyons, Boston News Bureau; C. W. Palmer, Woonsocket, R. I.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—Advertisers have had to pay the larger proportion of the increased costs and now are bearing more than their share of the cost of newspaper production, W. G. Steward, vice president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, declared at its meeting here.

The time has arrived, he said, for the reader to pay his fair share of the increase in the overhead expenses of the publisher.

The police say York admitted entering the home by a rear window accidentally left open, and of escaping through a window in Miss Carrow's room.

NAVY OFFICERS HURT IN AUTO

Machine Collides With Milk Wagon on Chelsea Bridge; Driver Also Injured

Daniel Rossborough, driver of a milk wagon, Lieutenant Dennis J. Kiely and Ensign Milton P. Wilson, the latter two of the U. S. S. Savannah, were injured when a roadster in which the two officers were riding collided with the wagon driven by Rossborough on the north draw of the Chelsea bridge today.

Rossborough is at the Relief Hospital seriously hurt while the two officers are under the care of the ship's surgeon aboard the Savannah. Just what caused the accident is not known to the police of the Charlestown station.

Rossborough was driving toward Chelsea while the officers were approaching in the opposite direction. Suddenly the roadster swerved and struck a shaft on the wagon. Rossborough was hurled from his seat and numerous quarts of milk spilled into the roadway. The windshield of the auto was smashed.

Lieutenant Kiely was thrown forward against the steering wheel and rendered unconscious. Flying glass cut Ensign Wilson, and it is feared that one or two particles penetrated one of his eyes. Rossorough was rushed to the Relief Hospital, where it was found he had sustained contusions to his left arm and both legs, in addition to a severe shaking up.

W. G. Shea of 176 Lowell street, Peabody, who drove up at the time, took the two officers to the navy yard, where they were first treated at the dispensary, after which they were taken aboard their ship. Lieutenant Kiely had several cuts and abrasions about his face and arms. Ensign Wilson was cut about the hands and face, had a split lip, a cut over his left eye and the injury to the eye itself.

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 21.—Terence MacSwiney, hunger striking Lord Mayor of Cork, was delirious most of today. He was forcibly fed this morning, his wife stated. This was the seventieth day of MacSwiney's self-imposed fast.

Mrs. MacSwiney, wife of the famous prisoner, was weeping and excited when she left Brixton Jail Infirmary at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

"Terence has been delirious most of the day," said she. "I hold Dr. Griffith's responsible for it. He forced two teaspoons of beef extract into Terence's mouth this morning. Terence was too weak to make effective protest, but he raved about it when he became delirious.

"We protested, but were threatened that we would be barred from the prison if we objected."

MacSwiney's mind wandered. During a lucid interval he heard a slight noise near his cot and turned to his wife, murmuring in pleading tones:

"Please do not leave me. They are preparing another torture for me."

KENYON FAMILY WEEP AS LAWYER IN COURT PLEADS FOR LIFE

KENYON CASE LATEST IN QUEER TRAGEDY SERIES

BABY IN ANTEROOM.

Baby Hugh Kenyon, one year old next Monday, who has played such an important role in this tragedy slept through the proceeding in an improvised crib in the anteroom while a courtroom, taxed to capacity followed the closing chapter of the mother's trial. Many of the spectators were weeping when the first argument of the defence was finished.

The husband made an effort to stave off the tears, but was compelled to bury his face in a handkerchief. The sons also wept openly, and the defendant softly reached over and patted the arm of her husband, so obviously grief stricken.

Attorney Dunn did not spare Dr. Tetlow. After a bitter condemnation of the man who he said had broken up the Kenyon home under the guise of friendship and professional treatment, the attorney declared: "Who will say that his death was not an act of divine providence?"

The Kenyon family life, he said, was a happy one until the entrance of Dr. Tetlow. The prosecution's case, he asserted, was based entirely on circumstantial evidence.

"Not one drop of coward's blood flows in that woman's veins," he said, pointing to the defendant.

"SCORNED" WOMAN.

"There are other grounds upon which she might seek an acquittal—self-defence and emotional insanity, but she has chosen to come in here and tell you the truth—that the shooting was an accident."

Both counsel for the state and the defense stated during their arguments that Mrs. Kenyon had had a fair trial.

Assistant State Attorney H. H. Hewitt told the jurors that "crime knows no sex," that it is "the same crime whether in a male or female heart." He scoffed the defendant's declaration that she went to the doctor's apartment on the day of the shooting, June 11, last, for the purpose of ending her own life.

"She had two bullets left in the gun after the doctor was shot," he said. "Isn't it logical to assume that if it was her intention to commit suicide, she would have used them then?"

After quoting "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," he charged that the shooting was the result of a disagreement between the woman and her paramour and contended that her own testimony convicted her of manslaughter, a legal point which was challenged by the defendant's counsel in his argument.

Today was devoted to arguments by Judge Herbert W. Rathbun, chief counsel for Mrs. Kenyon, and Major H. A. Holt, the State's attorney. Judge George E. Hinman was expected to give his charge to the jury early tomorrow.

The Kenyon trial is now in its third week. The jurors have not been kept segregated. They are allowed to return to their homes each night after a warning by the court against discussing the case or reading newspaper accounts.

Alvin Kenyon, sorrowful at the breaking up of his home, admits that through blindness to his wife's infatuation for another man he might have been partially responsible for the tragic result of the triangle. He spoke of the pretty compliments paid Mrs. Kenyon by the doctor with gifts of flowers, fruit or books and how he himself had been negligent in such matters. "Women seem to like those things," he said.

BANDIT HELD UP NEW YORK TRAIN

the statement received by the police, the train was waiting for orders and some additional cars. The flagman was standing at the rear of the train when he noticed five men coming in his direction.

Without a word of warning, Sinclair said, one of the men opened fire on him and shot him in the leg. Then three of the men boarded the train and held up the passengers. Other members of the crew knew nothing about the holdup until the robbers had departed.

A short time after the hold-up, Captain Jeremiah O'Brien and detectives of the Fillmore avenue station arrested a man giving his name as John Depke, twenty-two years old, and his brother, Stanley, seventeen years old, both of No. 600 Clinton street.

They were found hiding in a hallway a short distance from the scene of the robbery. They were taken before the victims of the train robbery and, according to the police, were identified as two of the men who took part in the affair. They were locked up on an open charge.

BRITISH RAILWAY MEN MAY QUIT

Report That They Have Voted to Go Out in Sympathy With Miners

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 21.—British railmen have decided to strike immediately in sympathy with the coal miners, according to the Manchester Guardian today.

The Guardian said that the representatives of the National Union of Railwaymen had over-ruled J. H. Thomas, secretary of the union and leader of the conservatives, and voted "on a lightning sympathy walkout."

When the meeting of railwaymen's delegates adjourned for lunch Thomas denied that the men had decided to strike tonight. Delegates admitted that the session was a stormy one. Fresh instructions were received during the day from provincial districts which were said to have strengthened the determination of the moderates.

According to the Pall Mall Gazette, leaders of the striking miners have rebuffed all attempts of other labor leaders to bring about mediation. The miners' leaders are said to have declared that they will not stand for any outside interference.

Rioting was renewed today at Tony-Pandy, Wales, which was the scene of similar outbreaks on Tuesday and Wednesday. The rioters began looting property, but were dispersed by the police, who used their riot sticks freely.

BEAUTY SLAIN IN HOTEL ROOM

San Francisco Police Seek Male Companion of Victim; Cleaner's Mark Vital Clew

San Francisco, Oct. 21.—The body of a beautiful woman about thirty-five years old, was discovered by a maid in a room at the Knickerbocker Hotel in this city.

The woman's hands were tied behind her back, a gag had been thrust down her throat and death, according to the police and officials from the coroner's office, was due to strangulation.

A description of the woman and her companion furnished the police by Night Clerk Cosgrove of the hotel.

Cleaner's mark on a pair of gloves.

"Donaldson," which the police believe to be a fictitious name, is described by Cosgrove as a man with a ruddy complexion, about five feet eight inches tall, and he wore a dark, gray sack suit and Fedora hat.

Blood on the woman's finger nails gave evidence that she had struggled with her assailant, but no guests of the hotel have been found who heard any unusual sounds during the night.

DID YOU FIND THE CUTE PUP?

FLOOD OF 'DOG LETTERS' PROVE AMERICAN'S POPULARITY

By THE PICTURE EDITOR.

And the loser was glad to pay.

Sounds like a contradictory parable, doesn't it? But its straight truth. And thereby hangs a tale, as the "high brow" novelists say.

Last Saturday the P. E. was going through his mail for prize pictures and at the same time listening to the tales of no less than three picture salesmen and taking a morning squint at Mr. Brisbane's "Today" column when he (the P. E.) came upon a snapshot that had him stumped. Looked like a plain, everyday photo of a pile of leaves and a convoy of unclothed trees.

OH WATSON! LOOKA HERE!

"What's so blamed strange about a pile of leaves," mused the P. E., pulling out the attached letter. "This is a picture of my dog," read the letter. "He is blended into the leaves so that it is hard to make him out."

The P. E. located the dog (in the picture) and dashed into friend boss' office. Left the picture salesmen flat—just like that. "Take a flash at this hound hidden in the leaves," said the P. E. to the Boss. The Boss looked. "It would never show up in the cut," said the Boss to the P. E., final like.

"Betcha," said the P. E. "What?" asked the Boss.

"Cigar," said the P. E. "Bet," quoth the Boss.

At fifteen minutes of eleven on Monday morning, a messenger arrived with a special delivery letter for the P. E. It was sent by Charles D. Geatano, No. 156 State street, Boston. And it was a correct solution of the problem. From that minute until late last night the letters have been coming in by the armful. They have come by special messenger, by special delivery mail and by straight mail.

BOSS LOSES THAT "CEEGAR."

The picture editor yelled to the Boss for help (and his cigar). The Boss smiled and produced both. The help, you see above. The cigar is no more.

Do you know why the Boss smiled? Because that little line, tucked away in an obscure corner of the picture page and printed in small type brought thousands of replies from Boston American readers.

It was not the reward. That was but $2. It was the desire on the part of members of the big happy family of American readers to join in the fun.

And it showed that our family likes the paper and reads it thoroughly. And it showed that they like the picture page, one of the big, new features of New England's great home-going newspaper.

AD MEN BEGIN CONFERENCE

Delegates Entertained at Luncheon by Boston Newspaper Publishers

Advertising men from all sections of New England, as well as other parts of the country, gathered today for the first annual gathering of the New England Advertising Conference, at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

Registration of delegates and a conference of the presidents of the several clubs in the district consumed the morning session.

At noon the delegates were welcomed to the city by Robert Lincoln O'Brien of the Boston Herald, in a brief address made at a luncheon tendered by the publishers of the Boston daily newspapers.

This afternoon a general conference was held and tonight a banquet is on the program.

Included among those at the conference this morning were the following presidents of the different clubs: T. B. Faulkner, Charter Oak Club of Hartford, Ct.; Gordon Schoenfarber of the Town Criers, Providence; Charles T. Cahill of the Old Colony Advertising Club of Brockton; R. N. Spencer, Advertising Club, Worcester; Albert D. Gary, Publicity Club, Springfield; Albin N. Randall, Portland, Me., Advertising Club; George B. Frolich, Pilgrim Publicity Association, Boston.

Miss A. Frances Hanson, Advertising Women's Club of Boston; Tilton S. Bell, Lantern Club of Boston; H. C. Christopher, Advertising Club of Northampton, and W. B. Griffin, Advertising Club of Bridgeport, Ct.

These executive committeemen of the New England Association of Advertising Clubs were also in attendance: H. Wesley Curtis, Frank A. Black, Pilgrim Publicity Association; George W. Danielson, H. M. Parson, Town Criers; R. C. Moore, Advertising Club of Worcester; Dorothy Entwistle and Josephine Sullivan, Advertising Women's Club of Boston; F. W. Spollett, Advertising Club of Brockton, and Frank B. Cummings of the Advertising Club of Portland.

Rowe Stewart, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, also attended the conference and spoke briefly. Ideas were exchanged and plans made for carrying on the work of the conference. The session this afternoon included a general discussion of advertising matters.

At the dinner tonight Rowe Stewart will be a speaker and in addition the following speakers are listed: Paul T. Charington, secretary and treasurer of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers; Frederick Cullen, president of the Johnson Educator Food Company, and Louis K. Liggett, head of the United Drug Company.

The convention will resume tomorrow, when an all-day business session is scheduled.

WANT SIX-CENT FARES ON BERKSHIRE ELECTRICS

North Adams, Oct. 21.—In a petition filed with the public utilities commission the Berkshire Street Railway Company seeks permission for a 20 per cent. increase in fares. The company is desirous of maintaining its present fare zones but wants to make the fare six cents instead of five per zone, claiming that the increase is needed because of recent wage increases granted motormen and conductors.

MRS. HOUSTON DIES IN CONCORD AT 93

Mrs. Mary L. Houston, widow of the Rev. Hiram Houston, formerly of Dorchester, is dead at the home of her niece, Miss Harriet P. Rood, at No. 85 Main street, Concord. Mrs. Houston, who was 93 years old, was one of the oldest women in the town. Death was due to pneumonia.

INELIGIBLES HUSTLE REGULAR TIGER TEAM

Princeton, Oct. 21. — Coach Roper gave his team a long scrimmage in preparation for the Navy game Saturday. The "omelettes" were picked as the varsity opponents and the big ineligible team gave the regulars a hard workout.

DOBIE INSTRUCTS IN OPEN STYLE GAME

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Cornell went at the business of developing the forward pass attack for the Colgate game, and for two hours Coach Dobie kept the varsity on the offensive, Quarterback Carry calling for planning a more ambitious passing game Saturday than ever before.

The passes used yesterday were of widely differing nature, and they were hurled by different men, including Carry, Kaw and Mayer. Of the three Carry is the most accurate, but Kaw is rapidly developing into a topnotcher, and Mayer and Jewett are capable of putting them across with pretty good speed and accuracy. The Ithacans look for an open attack from Colgate, but Dobie means to meet it with one of his one. Horrell, the varsity centre, who has been laid up for a week or more, was in togs today, but did not get into the scrimmage.

REAL BOHEMIANS ON CORNHUSKER ELEVEN

Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 21.—Two members of the Nebraska football eleven, that meets Rutgers and Penn State during Election Day week, are real Bohemians—not the Greenwich Village variety. They are Pucelik, left tackle, and Hubka, fullback. Their forefathers were born in Prague, Bohemia, which formerly was a part of Austria-Hungary. The homes of these players are in Prague, Nebraska, about sixty miles from Lincoln. Hubka, who is playing his final year of cornhusker football, is considered one of the best fullbacks the Lincoln school has ever brought forth. This season his work has been close to phenomenal. Ireland and Sweden also are represented on the Nebraska eleven in players, "Dinty" Moore right half, and Swanson left end.

BUTTERWORTH UNABLE TO PLAY FOR EXETER

Exeter, N. H., Oct. 21.—Ben Butterworth, Exeter right tackle, who was injured at New Haven last Saturday, has returned, but will probably not be able to play before the Worcester game next week. Smart is being worked on the end for the Harvard freshman game, and Reed, formerly right end, is working in the backfield. Colby will probably replace Butterworth and Reed retained in the backfield.

O'Brien at Peabody Square

STRANGE CHAIN OF TRAGEDY

Three Suicides of Prominent Members Prior to Death of Doctor

Dr. Herbert Tetlow, for whose slaying in his Stonington, Ct., apartment, after a clandestine love affair lasting five years, Mrs. Mabel Kenyon is on trial, was a member of the "tragedy class" of Dartmouth College.

This was the class of 1893. Dr. Tetlow was the fourth man of the class to meet death in violent form.

Alger Vincent Allen, Boston, suicide by poison, March 6, 1806.

Charles Carpenter Goss, Dover, N. H., suicide, May 3, 1915.

Against this grim record must be placed the names of a number of middle-aged, happy, prosperous Bostonians who promise to die full of years and honors. Numbered among 1893 men are:

Charles B. Gordon, manager of the Carter Ink Company.

Willard G. Aborn, banker and broker.

They have escaped the evil spell of "1893." They laugh at the idea of a "hoodoo."

"HOODOO'S" FIRST VICTIMS.

Alger Vincent Allen, son of Judge W. H. Allen of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, was studying law in Boston University Law School when he took his own life at the age of twenty-six. Young Allen had married a woman several years his senior. His money has disappeared. He wrote a note to Mrs. Allen telling her of his intentions. After his death she left for Europe.

Strangely enough, Robert Doty Maynard, who was 35 when he died, also was the son of a judge, Elisha B. Maynard of Springfield and the Massachusetts Superior Court. Young Maynard, a son and a daughter, on a farm in Ashfield near Northampton. Walking along the road to Williamsburg on a beautiful Spring morning 14 years ago, he swallowed a combination of corrosive sublimate and wood alcohol.

Maynard was a civil engineer. While employed in Mexico by a rubber company his health became impaired. No other reason was suggested for his suicide.

Neither the Allen nor the Maynard case attracted nearly so much attention as the suicide in 1915 of Col. Charles Carpenter Goss, president of the Merchants' National Bank of Dover. Goss came from a family of New Hampshire bankers.

After leaving Dartmouth he was employed in the National Shawmut Bank. Following the death of his father he was called home to Pittsfield, N. H., remaining there until, in 1900, he went to Dover. He was married and had one son.

KILLING OF DOCTOR.

The killing of Dr. Tetlow happened comparatively recently. Mrs. Kenyon's story was that she became friendly with the physician during the absence of her third husband. These relations with the physician, she declared at her trial, had been broken off. Meeting the doctor on June 11, she testified she told him of a conversation she had just had with a woman acquaintance. Dr. Tetlow insulted her, Mrs. Kenyon said.

Members of the class of '93 at Dartmouth have discussed among themselves from time to time the strange ending of these four of their fellows. When three members of the class had met death by their own hands, the others—recalling the old saying that fires and fatalities "run in threes"—were sure that this was the end.

But—and the thought is disturbing—if this be true, what does the Tetlow case signify?

PAL MOORE DEFEATS PURYEAR AT PROVIDENCE

Providence, Oct. 21.—Pal Moore of Memphis decisively defeated Earl Puryear of Oklahoma. Puryear shaded the Memphis boy for three rounds and then the latter woke up and took the remaining seven.

Barney McAtee of Boston was given the decision over Tommy Marks of Boston in an eight-round preliminary. Freddy Warren of East Boston had an easy time with Harry Mitchell of Providence in the second eight-round preliminary.

SCHOOLS PUT OVER GRID GAME UNTIL NOVEMBER

The football game scheduled for today at Billerica between the Mitchell Military Boys School eleven of that town and the Fessenden School team of Newton was postponed until early next month.

HUNT RENEWED FOR CONVICTS

Possible Clews to Escaped Prisoners Are Found in New England

Renewed precautions were taken today by the police of Boston and other cities and towns of New England to intercept the two desperate escaped Sing Sing prisoners, George Stivers and Marcus Barrett, believed to be attempting to reach this city.

All highways in Connecticut leading toword Springfield were guarded by police armed with riot guns, in the belief that the fugitives, driving a stolen automobile, were traveling to Boston by that route.

PURSUED THREE MEN.

At the same time the authorities of New Hampshire were convinced that the desperadoes visited that section as a result of an attempted holdup of George Wilkins in his store in Henniker, N. H. Wilkins fought with two or three men who attempted to rob him, his assailants being frightened away when a revolver was fired by one of their number.

Wilkins and a companion, after securing weapons, pursued the three men, who fled in an automobile, eventually overtaking them when they were forced to stop for gasolene. An exchange of shots took place and then the three men leaped from their machine and escaped to the woods. A Connecticut number plate "4510," issued originally for a small car, was attached to the touring machine in which the holdup men were traveling.

This fact convinced the authorities that the men were the fugitives who had previously been reported in the vicinity of Danbury, Ct. A search instituted in that vicinity by Warden Lawes of Sing Sing and a posse of prison guards was unsuccessful, however.

At Newark, N. J., a possible clew was discovered when a pair of bluish-gray trousers and a faded denim shirt, each marked with the number "6151," were found in an abandoned automobile truck. A pair of denim overalls was found near the other clothing.

POLICE PATROL ROADS.

The Hartford police communicated with those of Springfield, stating that it was the apparent intention of the convicts to attempt to reach Boston by way of the western Massachusetts city. As a result Springfield policemen patrolled all roads through the night, as did other officers in cities and towns between there and Boston.

The Boston authorities, while they had received no definite information regarding the course of the fugitives, were prepared for eventualities. A keen watch was being maintained and they expressed themselves as being confident of capturing the men should they venture here.

GETS $4,000 FOR HEART BALM

Barnstable, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Marianna Keveney was awarded a verdict of $4,000 today against Mrs. Florence M. Fay, whom she charged with alienating her husband's affections.

Mrs. Keveney, whose husband, James F. Keveney, is a furniture dealer, sued for $15,000.

The case was tried in Barnstable Superior Court. Mrs. Keveney introduced testimony to show that her rival supplanted her in the affections of the furniture dealer.

She stated that when she went to the home of "the other woman" to take him home, Mrs. Fay threw water on her. On another occasion, she said, her rival threatened her with a revolver.

The wife declared that her husband had been spending most of his time in Mrs. Fay's home, visiting her six or seven times a day.

EAST BOTSON POLICE TO SEEK MISSING BOY

The East Boston police have been asked to search for Francis Smith, eleven years old, who has been missing from his home, No. 257 Border street, since yesterday. Young Smith is the sixth boy to have run away from that section of the city in two days.

Bars Child Workers From Offices

Boys and girls of compulsory school age may work during school sessions in factories, workshops and cercantile establishments, but not in the offices of professional men.

This is the effect of a ruling given Miss Ethel M. Johnson of the State Department of Labor today by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

The reason the distinction is made is the language of the Child Labor Act, passed in 1913. It gives the superintendent of schools the power to grant employment certificates to children, but only for work in "factory, workshop, manufacturing, mercantile or mechanical establishment."

According to the letter of the law, a lawyer's office, for instance, does not come under any of the five heads. Attorney-General Allen now rules that the letter of the law holds, and boys in such offices are illegally employed.

FIRE VETS URGE TWO SHIFTS

Roxbury Association Appeals to Voters to Mark "Yes" on Ballot

Editor, American:

On Tuesday, November 2, the people of Boston will vote on this question:

"Shall the fire department be divided into a night and day shift, according to the Acts of 1919?"

The Veteran Firemen's Association of Roxbury to a man will vote "yes" on that question. They understand the terrible mental torture firemen have to undergo in being cooped up in a firehouse waiting for an alarm of fire. The opponents of the measure, those who place mammon above God, do not.

Your paper has been kind to the downtrodden since its establishment in this city. We "vets" maintain that the Boston firemen are downtrodden when they are compelled to stay around a firehouse day in and day out. Isn't it about time to lift the burden from the backs of the men who are willing to face death in the performance of duty? The Boston American can help by publishing this letter and saying a kind word for the firemen in this, their fight for a twelve-hour day.

Statistics and an appeal for support on the assumption that the firemen are entitled to the proposed change may not count. But a request for fair play for the firemen so they may be home in the bosom of their families oftener ought to soften the hearts of the most carping critics of the legislation sought.

Yours for fair play for the Boston firemen, MARTIN F. CAVANAGH,
Sec. Roxbury Vet. Firemen's Asso.

CARR RE-ENGAGED AS BASEBALL COACH

Syracuse, Oct. 21.—Lee Carr, coach of baseball at Syracuse University, today signed a contract for the next two years to continue as baseball instructor on the hill. He has already completed his eleventh year at the university, having first taken on the job of handling the baseball squad in 1910.

St. Ambrose Whist Party

[illegible] men members of St. Ambrose's parish, Dorchester, will hold a whist party tonight in the parish hall, Adams street in aid of the building fund. Many valuable prizes will be awarded.

FULLER QUIZZED BY WASHBURN

Challenged to Explain Attacks on Warner and Lodge

An open letter demanding that he present proof of his charges against Speaker Joseph E. Warner, in the primary campaign, and tell the voters why he has repeatedly abused Senator Lodge, was sent to Congressman Alvan T. Fuller today by Robert M. Washburn, Independent Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Congressman Fuller will speak from the same platform with Senator Lodge in Malden tonight, and Mr. Washburn demands that Fuller explain his attacks against Lodge in the latter's presence. Washburn's letter follows:

"You will note that I do not address you as the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, because I am, and you are not.

"Will you give to the people of your own home town at your rally Thursday evening, the evidence which you simply say you have against the character of the Hon. Joseph E. Warner? You cannot do this because you have no evidence.

"Will you tell Senator Lodge, on the same platform with him, why you are abusively against him, and with Woodrow Wilson on the League of Nations, the issue of this campaign?

"Will you tell Senator Lodge, on the same platform with him, why you called him, on the floor of Congress, 'a blood-drinking German militarist?'

"Will you tell the Republican voters of Malden why you are quoted in the Democratic campaign text book of 1920, from a speech in Congress, in these words: 'I am proud to take off my hat to President Wilson and his attitude toward the Nations of Europe, and his League to enforce peace.'

"You will not answer these questions, because you can not answer them stisfetorily; for which reason sons you should be defeated for election on November 2."

Co. K to Have Reunion

Former members of Company K of the 301st Infantry will hold their second annual reunion October 30 at Odd Fellows' Hall, South End. Plans will be discussed for the organization of a permanent society.

GIRL ATTACKED BY WEAPON

Government Theory in Wanamaker Case Changed by Finding of Instrument

Discovery of the weapon with which Mildred Wanamaker, pretty typist of Wakefield, is alleged to have been struck down by Frank Ramey of Lynnfield on October 4, has changed the government theory of the method of the attack.

The first pathological deductions made public were that the girl had been kicked in the head until rendered insensible, and the wounds were reported to have coincided with such an hypothesis.

Information from Melrose Hospital, where the victim has been hovering between life and death for fifteen days, indicates that each blow caused a clean rent in the scalp, which wounds would, it is held, be consistent with blows by a weapon such as that reported to have been found a few days ago in the bushes close to the spot where Miss Wanamaker was found.

DECLINES DESCRIPTION.

Assistant District Attorney George Stanley Harvey admits that the prosecution is in possession of an implement which he is satisfied was the one used by Miss Wanamaker's assailant, but he has declined to give any description of it. More mystery veils the weapon than anything else in the Wakefield tragedy.

The weapon is reported to bear bloodstains and strands of hair that match that of Miss Wanamaker, but no reason can be ascribed for the unusual effort on the part of the authorities to keep everything pertaining to the weapon so secret.

Equal mystery shrouds the discovery of the weapon. Assistant District Attorney Harvey, State Officer Silas Smith and Chief of Police James J. Pollard of Wakefield made a flying trip to the scene of the attack a few days before the special grand jury convened and are reported to have found the blood-stained weapon in the bushes within a few wards of where Miss Wanamaker's unconscious form was discovered by Victor Bruerton on the morning of the attack.

PREVIOUSLY SEARCHED.

This entire region had been previously searched. The only thing resembling a weapon found was a strip of two-inch piping, that lay in the bushes on the side of Montrose avenue, near where Miss Wanamaker's pumps were found. This was rusty, but did not bear any bloodstains or strands of hair. It was made an exhibit and many of the townspeople think may have since been accepted by the authorities as the weapon of attack.

No operation has been attempted on Miss Wanamaker because the double fracture of her skull fortunately did not cause any brain pressure.

Miss Wanamaker is now reported to be on the road to recovery. While clouded, her thoughts are daily becoming more spontaneous and coherent.

The swift indicting of Frank Ramey, nineteen-year-old Lynnfield boy, who was twice arrested for molesting Mildred some time ago, indicates a speedy trial. Ramey entered a plea of not guilty when arraigned before Chief Justice Aiken in Middlesex Superior Court, charged with "assault with intent to murder" Miss Wanamaker, and was committed in default of $15,000 bail.

SUICIDE THREAT MADE BY MUTE

By gestures and motions John Kelley, seventeen-year-old deaf mute, informed officers attached to the Back Bay police station today that he intended to commit suicide by hanging himself with his belt in the cell.

He was removed to the Tombs and placed under guard.

Though unable to hear anything, he stopped in his tracks as the shot rang out.

Kelley had attempted to steal a bicycle, owned by Charles Hudson, a messenger, whose home is in Medford street, Arlington, the police charge. A woman gave warning and he ran around through Boylston and Arlington streets into the Garden, where the officer took up the chase.

An officer passing his cell today was attracted to it by strange noises. The boy had his belt in his hand and by signs conveyed to the officer the information that he intended to hang himself. Captain Goode was at once notified and ordered his transfer to the Tombs.

MARRIAGE ON IMPULSE BRINGS MISERY, MADNESS AND MURDER—REV. E. L. CARDEY

Don't get married on impulse. Don't marry a man or woman you don't know well. That way lies misery, madness and murder. The voice is the voice of Rev. E. L. Cardey, pastor of the Adventist Church of Boston. Such marriages are marriages of ignorance, he says. They too often result in divorce suits, alienation trials or murder.

Rev. Mr. Gardey's remarks on marriages of impulse were called forth by the recent epidemic of unions of that sort, or their results.

Among such marriages may be mentioned the following:

MRS. GEORGE BROWN and George Brown, the man just convicted of the murder of Richard Dunn of Sandwich. Dunn was admirer of Mrs. Brown. The Browns married "on impulse."

MRS. MABEL KENYON and Alvin Kenyon. Mrs. Kenyon is on trial for the slaying of Dr. Herbert Tetlow. She accepted him to provide herself with "intellectual companionship." She married Kenyon on impulse.

MISS VERA BARSTOW and William F. Lawson of New York. Miss Barstow was a violinist. She married Lawson "on impulse" when she met him unexpectedly in a Chicago railroad station.

LOUISE B. WEBB, New York society girl, and Thomas Leonard, mounted policeman. They married "on impulse." Their romance of the bridle path is still young.

"Know your life mate." That is the theme of Rev. Mr. Cardey's sermon.

Don't marry "her" because her hair is curly or her eyes are blue. Don't marry "him" because he looks like a "movie" hero. He may be a scene shifter and have the potentialities of a wife beater, Rev. Mr. Cardey says.

"Five instances could be pointed out, where young women under the spell of superficial attraction literally rushed into marital relations.

"The aftermath of such marriages makes another story of disappointment and despair.

"Coming about under spells, they must be subjected to the folly of a spell.

"Marriage is a serious matter.

"It is to be governed by true love and never entered into under the excitement of a freak desire and whim.

"The best type of love that resulted in marriage, I find in the Bible. It is well to go back at times to these types of love. You can call to mind something about Jacob and his devotion to Rachel in that book. This was a true union.

"'Jacob served seven years for Rachel and they seemed unto him but a few days for the love that he had for her.'—Genesis XXIX; 20.

"This was not marriage by impulse. There was plenty of romance in it. He loved Rachel and showed it by being sensible with his expression of it.

"Getting married because of a pretty face, or while under the influence of some overmastering desire, is sure to end in disaster.

"The youthful love which is often found in rural communities where a boy and a girl have grown up together and seen much of one another for years, makes for a successful marriage.

"Of course, all cannot possess these opportunities.

"I believe fathers and mothers should have more to do in helping their sons and daughters to choose a life companion.

"Some young men think Dad is an old fool, but Dad knows that many young men are fools in the way they enter the marriage relation.

"But the old man's advice and the advice of mothers is better than this hit-and-miss style of matrimony, which is nothing but the modern impulse of many matrimonial relations."

Eerie Moans Startle Grove Hall Sleepers

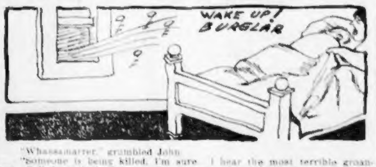
"John! John! Merciful heavens, John, wake up!"

Mrs. Amanda Housewife of Wayne street, Grove Hall, was trying to attract the attention of her sleeping spouse, early today.



"Whassamatter," grumbled John.

"Someone is being killed, I'm sure. I hear the most terrible groaning. Call the police! Get up! For mercy's sakes do something!"

"Go to sleep," John ungallantly replied, turning over pettishly, "it's the wind."

Conversations of similar purport were taking place throughout the entire district as a result of weird, eerie moaning that could be heard on both Wayne and Maple streets in the Grove Hall section of Roxbury.

Patrolman Francis P. Cahill of the Dudley street station heard them, and being naturally a brave man, with no fear of spirits, he started to investigate.

Following the sound as a hound follows scent, the policeman encountered a barbed wire fence surrounding a field. He climbed the fence, but in doing so tore one of his legs on the wire. Despite his suffering, the stout-hearted officer carried on and his determination was rewarded. He located the origin of the sounds.

They were caused by the wind, as Mr. John Housewife, truly but unwittingly remarked. An open sewer pipe lying in a field furnished an instrument upon which Aeolus, with the assistance of Boreas, played a mournful dirge.

Girls, Send in Photos to Win $5,000 in Prizes

These words are addressed to the lovely girls of New England—and so far as we have observed that means ALL the girls of New England.

Your attention, young ladies, is respectfully called to the offer of the Boston American to pay $5,000 for four photographs.

The American is instituting a quest for the loveliest girl in New England. For her photograph we will pay $2,000. For the photograph of the young lady adjudged next in merit we will pay $1,000. There are two third prizes of $500 each.

WILL RETURN ALL PHOTOS.

To have a try at one of these prizes all that is necessary is that you send your photograph without delay to "Loveliest Girl Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass." Write your name and address plainly on the back of the picture, which will be returned to you in good condition.

On Monday of next week the American will begin the publication of Loveliest Girl photographs. Our readers will study the pictures with us as the contest proceeds. It is not a voting contest. There is nothing to sell. No fees are charged. There are no puzzles to be solved. There are no verses to write. All you have to do is send a photograph to Loveliest Girl Editor.

The names of the judges, persons of the highest standing and unquestionable authority, will be printed shortly. They are names that will command respect and guarantee impartial decisions.

SEND IN PICTURES NOW.

In this contest beauty—or "loveliness"—is defined as "intelligence in a fine setting." Outside appearance will be taken into consideration, but first in the estimation of the judges will come the intelligence that shows in the face, in the line of the forehead, the shape of the head, the earnestness of expression. The American's $5,000 will go to the type of beauty that a man would like to see preserved in the portrait of his mother, not to the type that might interests him for five minutes kicking up its little heels in silk tights behind the footlights.

Hundreds of photographs already have been submitted. There cannot be too many. Each will receive careful consideration. If you know some girl who, you think, one of the loveliest girls in New England, forward her photograph without delay. The judges may be of the same opinion. It may mean $2,000, $1,000 or $500 to your young friend.

TWO PENN STATE STARS ON THE HOSPITAL LIST

State College, Pa., Oct. 21.—Both Hugo Bezdek and Freshman Coach "Dutch" Hermann were able to get a line on their respective elevens when the varsity and yearlings went at each other in a stiff scrimmage. The freshmen are preparing for their opening game with Indiana Normal Saturday and the experience gained in meeting the varsity eleven should stand them in good stead.

Two of Bezdek's regulars were absent from practice because they are suffering from injuries received in the North Carolina game. Dick Rauch has a sprained foot, which, while not serious, is enough to keep him idle for a few days.

The injury to Casey Jones may prove to be more serious than was at first supposed, and it is feared that he may have a broken shoulder.

Y. D. HERO SENT TO ATLANTA

Judge Howe Promises to Aid Forger With Proud Record in Army

Joseph A. Hill, Yankee Division hero, gassed five times and wounded four, today started a sentence of one year and a day in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta. His offence was the forgery of a government allotment voucher for $100.

Hill didn't go away friendless. On the contrary, his journey from Brooklyn to Atlanta was brightened by the knowledge that Judge Howe of the United States Court in Brooklyn, had promised to aid him. Hill forged the voucher about the time he married his sweetheart, after being discharged from the Army hospital at Fox Hills, Long Island, New York. She deserted him when the proceeds of the forgery had been spent.

Judge Howe was reluctant about sentencing Hill. He expressed regret over the fact that it was necessary, but added that excellent medical attention at Atlanta would benefit the prisoner, whose lungs have been affected by the gas.

Hill was being led away by a court attendant when Judge Howe called him before the bar. "I'll keep in touch with you," he said, "and your discharge from Atlanta when you get well will be a pardon."

RECEPTION TO R. A. WOODS BY 27 SETTLEMENTS

Twenty-seven settlements in and about Boston were represented at the first meeting of the Boston Social Union, which took the form of a reception to Robert A. Woods, head of the South End House, and Mrs. Woods, who recently returned from a 13-months trip 'round the world. The North Bennet Street Industrial School, where the affair was held, was crowded.

KILLS GIRL AND TRIES SUICIDE

New York Doctor, Jilted by Dentist Sweetheart, Fires Bullet Into Her Heart

New York, Oct. 21.—Pleading in vain against the repeated refusals of his former sweetheart to marry him, Dr. Max Rowe, twenty-eight years old, it is charged, shot Dr. Ruth Rubin, twenty-four, killing her instantly, and then, turning the revolver on himself, sent a bullet through his own brain. He is expected to die at any moment.

Dr. Rowe had been brooding for a long time over his love affair with Dr. Rubin that had started in his college days. According to the police, Dr. Rowe called on Dr. Rubin at an apartment where she maintained a dental office. He asked her to marry him. She refused. He answered her by shooting her twice, one bullet piercing her heart and killing her instantly. Seeing that she was dead, Dr. Rowe shot himself.

Tenants of the building where the shooting occurred say they heard Dr. Rowe say to Dr. Rubin:

"If you won't be mine you'll never be anybody else's."

The words were followed by two shots and a shriek and then another shot. When the tenants and the policemen reached the hallway where the shooting had occurred, they found the body of the woman crumpled up in a corner and a short distance away the writhing form of Dr. Rowe.

BROODED FOR WEEKS.

Half hysterical with grief, Mrs. Sarah Rowe, mother of Dr. Rowe, told the police today how he had been brooding for weeks over Miss Rubin's sudden indifference to him.

"Several weeks ago she suddenly changed," said Mrs. Rowe. "My son told me he called at her home and asked her to go out. She refused stating that she had to remain at home. When my son left her home, he noticed an automobile in front of her home. Two men were in the car. My son told me that he saw the girl go away in the automobile with the two men.

"That night, when he came home, he said to me: 'Mother, my heart is broken.' Since then I noticed my son has not been the same man. He did not sleep well or pay much attention to his work. He brooded continually.

LAST SEEN OF HIM.

"This morning I had difficulty in making him get up. Finally, at 10 o'clock he dressed and went out without paying any attention to his office work. He said: 'I'm just going for a walk.' That was the last I saw of him until now."

Mrs. Rowe said she did not know where her son had gotten the revolver. She said he had not had a weapon since six years ago, when he shot himself accidentally.

Dr. Rowe was prosperous and well liked among his associates and friends.

YOUTH PLEADS GUILTY TO SHOOTING STUDENT

Chester A. Baumeister, seventeen years old, was found guilty today in Cambridge Court of assault with a dangerous weapon, in shooting Joseph Nowell, a Technology student, the night of October 15. He was given a suspended sentence at Shirley Reformatory for Boys. Nowell was wounded in the arm during a mix-up among students and "town boys" on Charles River road, Cambridge. Baumeister promised the court that he would reimburse Nowell for doctor's bills.

Will Jail Violators of "Dry" Law

New York, Oct. 21.—With the seizure of 400 barrels of choice wine, valued at $125,000, from the cellar of E. Musco's wholesale liquor store, a new policy in dealing with violators of the Volstead act goes into effect.

Federal Judge Mayer announced that he and his three fellow judges have agreed to impose jail sentences, instead of fines, on violators of the act.

Federal agents who have been keeping an eye on the so-called booze "curb," discovered a truck being loaded with whiskey and seized it. On the cases was found the name of E. Musco. The raid on Musco's cellar followed.

HARDING STAND SUITS JOHNSON

Nothing Ambiguous About His Outright Rejection of League, Says Senator

By Universal Service.

New York, Oct. 21.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, in an address at Hoboken asserted that Senator Harding stands for outright rejection of the League of Nations, and there is nothing ambiguous and uncertain in his declaration of attitude.

Senator Johnson said in part:

"The issue today is the League of Nations as presented by President Wilson, which Governor Cox says he will take this country into, and which Harding says he won't.

"I speak of course solely from the public utterances of our candidate and these utterances make plain beyond cavil that when Senator Harding is President he will not take the United States into the league.

"He characterized the league as a 'military alliance which menaces peace and threatens all freedom.' He called it 'the supreme blunder,' and asserted that he would leave 'America free, independent and self-reliant, but offering friendship to all the world.'

"I am unable to understand the intellectual processes which can misinterpret or misconstrue these words, and will still insist that the words are meaningless, and that he, Harding, intends something else than he says.

"Joining the league with countries that owe the United States ten billion dollars is like a merchant placing himself in the hands of his debtors."

MOVIE STAR'S BROTHER ACCUSED OF MOONSHINING

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 21.—Edward LaRocque of Millbury, a brother of Jane Grey, the movie star, and an accomplice, were each held in $1,000 bail for the Federal Court when arraigned here charged with being moonshiners. LaRocque, with Charles Harris, was arrested in Bristol last Saturday, after a lively chase. When the buggy in which they were riding was searched utensils used in the manufacture of moonshine were found.

ACCUSED ATTACKER HELD UNDER BAIL OF $20,000

Bonifacio Angelona of Wilmington was held in $20,000 by the Middlesex grand jury after pleading not guilty to charges of assault with intent to murder and carrying a loaded revolver. It is alleged that he shot and dangerously wounded Joseph Casaletto and stabbed Mrs. Rosena Toriello in Wilmington two weeks ago.

Flammarion Indorses Telephone to Dead

By Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 21.—The report of Thomas A. Edison's statement that he is working on a telephone to communicate with the dead, is causing a tremendous stir in Paris. Many French savants, like Branly, the inventor of the first wireless apparatus, remain doubtfully expectant; others claim that no man of science would vouch for life after this; that the possibility exists of establishing scientific communication between spirits of this world and the other. Below is the opinion of Camille Flammarion, the noted French astronomer and scientist, author of "Death and Its Mystery."

By CAMILLE FLAMMARION,

Celebrated French Astronomer.

Edison's apparatus need not be a chimera. I admit I don't understand what substance he will use to establish the connection between the corporal bodies of this world and the astral bodies of the other selenium, but it seems to me that even the smallest human brain, or the brains of any living creature, dog or cat, would be more sensitive than any metal or metalloid.

In our heads, within our skulls we already have the instrument which enables us to communicate with the dead. No human invention will ever surpass it. We don't know how to use it yet but that will come in time.

For the soul exists, survives after death. Matter is but the clothing of the spirit. Nothing disappears — everything changes.

Our dead are still living. They see us. They hear us. In many cases they are still interested in terrestial matters—and sometimes are able to convey signs of this interest to us.

As a scientist I cannot affirm that the soul is immortal, but I do affirm that the soul lives long after the body is dead, and that in time will be able to control the fluids which make communication between the realm of death and life possible.

TWO BOSTON MEN CHOSEN FOR BROWN TRUSTEES

Providence, Oct. 21.—Fred T. Field of Boston was elected a trustee of Brown University at the annual meeting of the corporation. He was graduated from the institution in the class of 1900. T. D. Anderson was re-elected secretary for three years, and Frank W. Matteson of Providence and George F. Bean of Boston were re-elected trustees.

The report of the special committee on the erection of a chemical laboratory, made possible by the donation of $250,000 by Jesse H. Metcalf of this city, was accepted, and the meeting voted to erect the building at Thayer and Waterman streets.

URGES STANDARD SIZE IN PRODUCE CONTAINERS

Lawrence, Oct. 21.—At the 26th annual State convention of the Massachusetts Sealers' Association, in session here, many prominent officials in bureau of standards addressed the delegates. William T. White, commissioner of weights and measures of the department of farms and markets of New York, urged closer relations between the standards in the department of New York and of Massachusetts, and argued for the standardization of containers of produce.

PICKETS WITHDRAWN FROM RYAN-CUSHING FACTORY IN SOMERVILLE

The matter of the alleged strike in the Ryan-Cushing Company's factory in Somerville came up before Judge Pierce in the Supreme Judicial Court Tuesday. The company was prepared to show that they never had been unfair to organized labor, that not a single person was employed in their factory who was a member of Local Branch 127 of the Leatherworkers' Union at the time the alleged strike order was passed, and that no employee of theirs went on strike. In view of the general situation counsel for the Leatherworkers proposed to call off the alleged strike and to withdraw the pickets, and counsel for Ryan-Cushing Company agreed to drop the proceedings against the Union when shown satisfactory evidence that this had been done. Accordingly, Tuesday evening the local held a special meeting and passed the following vote, a certified copy of which under seal was immediately furnished to Ryan-Cushing Company.

"United Leather Workers'
"International Union,
"Local Branch No. 127.
"Boston, Oct. 19, 1920.

"At a special meeting held this evening the following vote was passed 'that the strike now in progress at the Ryan-Cushing Co. be declared off and that the pickets be immediately withdrawn.'

POLICEMAN HEARD THREATS TO "GET HIM"

Woman, 96, to Vote for Cox

Sheffield, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Walter Briggs, ninety-six years old, today registered as a voter and said she would vote for Cox.

Bride to Wear Black at 'Tragic, Wedding'

By Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 21.—Calling marriage "a tragedy for which the mind must be adequately prepared," Germaine de la Boissiere, the dashing French artist, has designed a black apartment in which she and her prospective husband will spend their honeymoon before leaving for their villa in the south of France.

The nine rooms of the apartment are covered with black, some with black velvet, others with satin, others with linen or wallpaper. Curtains and portieres are black; black the furniture, black the bed, black the sheets, black the tableware—while the bathtub is a huge block of black marble.

The bride's trousseau is a mass of black chiffon and chantillly lace. Onyx is the only stone used in her jewelry. She has sent notes written with white ink on black paper informing her friends that only black clad persons will be received during the "trying" period.

Mademoiselle de la Boisseire's contention is that if her husband is able to stand the strain of a black honeymoon he will face undauntedly the prospects of a brilliant future.

LEGION MARKERS TO BE REPLACED IN WOODLAWN

Despite a statement by officials of the Woodlawn cemetery that the official American Legion grave marker would not be permitted over the graves of World War veterans, the official designator is to be immediately replaced above the graves of all war heroes buried in the cemetery. This decision followed a hearing between the board of trustees of the cemetery and representatives from various veteran organizations.

COX WINDS UP N. E. CAMPAIGN

Takes Root to Task for Alleged False Statement on Treaty Stand

By Universal Service.

Bridgeport, Ct., Oct. 21.—Governor Cox wound up here his two days' whirlwind campaign in New England with a statement taking to task Elihu Root for an alleged false assertion in a speech in New York Tuesday night, that "Mr. Cox declared he will insist upon the treaty just as Mr. Wilson negotiated it."

The Democratic presidential candidate's statement included a telegram to Mr. Root restating his willingness to accept certain reservations and demanding an immediate correction.

TRYING TO BE CHARITABLE.

"I am trying to be charitable to these men," said Governor Cox, "in view of the fact that in their partisanship they may not be reading my public addresses, in which I have invariably said that it would be my purpose to accept any helpful reservations that will make certain the ratification of the treaty and the league, and that my election would be expressive by the desire of the American people for going into the league, whereas the election of Senator Harding upon his own statements, upon the statements of Johnson and Borah, would be indorsement for staying out of the league."

During the day Governor Cox spoke at Providence, R. I.; Blackstone, Mass.; and the following Connecticut points: Williamantic, Manchester, Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Waterbury and Bridgeport. He continued his policy of throwing overboard every issue except the League of Nations, with which he coupled bitter assaults upon Senator Lodge.

HECKLED BY WOMEN.

In Connecticut the candidate widened the scope of his attack to include Senator Brandegee, one of the leaders of the treaty "Irreconcilables." He urged the voters to defeat Senator Brandegee.

Large crowds were out to greet the presidential nominee and much enthusiasm was shown. Probably his most enthusiastic reception was at an indoor meeting in Hartford, where women formed the bulk of the audience.

Hecklers at Providence gave the Governor the liveliest time of the entire campaign. A woman was probably the most persistent of the questioners, and her cross-fire of questions and answers with the candidate kept the crowd roaring, first for one side and then the other.

LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID AT METHUEN; TWO HELD

Methuen, Oct. 21.—A Federal prohibition agent, assisted by a Methuen police officer, raided the slaughter house of Max Cohen on Pelham street and seized a keg containing a gallon of moonshine liquor. It was stated in the District Court that an attempt had been made to dispose of the contents of the keg.

With Cohen were arraigned Max Steinberg of Elm street, also a slaughter house keeper, who had moonshine and alcohol in his place, the police say, and David Holtszknhan, charged with interfering with and threatening one of the officers who made the raids. The men were bailed immediately after their arrest in bonds of $300.

JOBS IN STATE DROP 19 P. C.

Official Industrial Probe Shows Union Unemployment Is Greatest Since 1908

An investigation conducted by the State Departent of Labor and Industries, of employment conditions in Massachusetts, shows that at the close of June of this year almost 19 per cent. of the union labor of the State was out of work, according to a statement issued by the department.

Returns received from labor organizations with a membership aggregating 248,067 disclosed that 46,560 of their number were unemployed at that time.

HIGHEST SINCE 1908.

The per centage of unemployment is the highest recorded in the Department of Labor and Industries since 1908. Lack of work was by far the greatest factor of the unemployment, more than 75 per cent. of the industrial inactivity being due to it.

Haverhill leads the cities of the Commonwealth in point of unemployed, slightly over half of the organized labor of that city having been reported idle. The unusual amount of unemployment there was due to the heavy curtailment of production in he boot and shoe industry.

Boston was below the average with a percentage of 10. Lawrence, Lynn and Salem followed Haverhill with percentages each of about 30. The unemployment in Salem was accounted for largely by strikes of shoe and shoe machinery workers.

SHOE WORKERS HIT HARD

A tabulation by the department of the extent of unemployment in each of seven industrial classifications shows that the boot and shoe industry is by far the hardest hit, almost half the workers in this industry being out of work.

The seven industrial groups, with the percentages of unemployment in each, follow: Building trades, 8, boot and shoe industry, 44; textile industry, 20; steam and electric transportation, 4; iron and steel manufacturing, 14; printing and allied trades, 3; and a final group comprising all other unionized trades, 16.

LEAP OF ENGINEER SAVES COX INJURY

By Universal Service.

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 21.—Governor Cox was saved from possible serious injury or death in a railroad accident here by the presence of mind of the engineer of his special train.

When the flue in the engine cab burst, flooding the compartment with scalding steam, the engineer was compelled to jump from the moving locomotive. With great presence of mind, however, he threw on the emergency brakes before taking the plunge.

The train came to a stop within a hundred yards ahead of a regular passenger train following closely behind. The passenger train was flagged in time by a trainman.

White House Silent on Ruman Premier's Charge Wilson Promised War Aid

Washington, Oct. 21.—The statement by Premier Bratiano that President Wilson not only pledged military and naval aid from the United States to Rumania and other small nations at the eighth plenary session of the peace conference, but that all those nations positively expect the United States to fulfill that obligation startled the administration here today.

Adherents of Senator Spencer see in it complete vindication of the charge made by him during the recent controversy and which he insists are fully borne out by the official minutes of the conference.

When the Universal News Service dispatch containing the statement by the Premier was taken to the State Department it was stated that a reply would probably be forthcoming today.

Further than to state that the official version of the President's address to M. Bratiano as contained in the notes of Stenographer Carlson have already been made public and that it was proposed to stand upon them, the White House would make no comment.

Senators in Washington today were unanimous in saying that Rumania cannot expect the pledge to stand unless the Versailles treaty, including Article Ten, is ratified by the Senate. They point out that aside from predicating the pledge upon ratification of the treaty, President Wilson could not obligate this government to any such policy or performance.

URGES FENWAY FOR EXPOSITION

McDonald Tells Commission Buildings Should Be Made Permanent

Use of the Fenway, comprising 250 acres, for the holding of an International Exposition, was advocated by William J. McDonald, a prominent real estate operator, at the hearing before the special commission appointed by Governor Coolidge to consider the advisability of holding an international exposition before the year 1925 to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims.

The plan, as outlined by Mr. McDonald, called for the taking of the existing property in the Fenway section, exclusive of the various educational, residential and hospital buildings located there. He also suggested that the agricultural exhibits, athletic and water sports be held on land situated along the Charles river, which would make available the use of the Harvard Stadium, if the co-operation of Harvard University could be secured.

The assessed value of the Fenway property he gave as $30,000,000. "My idea is," he said, "that the exposition commission should have the authority to sell the section to various countries and States that would exhibit, and these exhibitors would establish permanent buildings, so that the exposition might be a permanent thing and not be destroyed overnight. The State owns 200 acres of land along the Charles river at the place in mind, and Harvard University owns some 150 acres in connection with the Stadium property."

Among others who favored the holding of an exposition was Edward G. Stacey, secretary of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce.

Senator Andrew A. Casassa of Revere told the commission of the advantages of Revere beach and the marshes and waterfront in that section.

Chairman William S. Felton announced that no further public hearings will be held. The commission is required to report its recommendations to the Legislature on or before January 15, 1921.

Why did Jeanne try to kill him---

and then nurse him back to life?

Jeanne tried deliberately and expertly to kill him. Carrigan, of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, had no doubt about that. For an hour she had been shooting and then—his head was filled with the roaring of a flood.

The world became twisted and black and the rest was silence. It was water that seemed to awaken him—cool and comforting as it trickled over his burning face and temples. She was nursing him back to life, this stunning girl who had tried so hard to kill him.

Why? Who was this beautiful girl with eyes like pools that had caught the reflection of fire? What strange part was she playing in this sudden drama in the land of the Three Rivers?

Here are romance and adventure and mystery in a setting of rare beauty. "The Flaming Forest" is unquestionably the most stirring tale yet written by James Oliver Curwood.

It is declared better than his two recent novels "The River's End" and "The Valley of Silent Men", each of which have sold over 100,000 copies in book form. It won't be out in book form for a year. So read it now—today—in November Good Housekeeping—just on sale.

BARES BRITISH PROPAGANDA

McSweeney Describes How England Tries to Influence U. S. Opinion on Ireland

By EDWARD F. McSWEENEY.

For some years the London Times has made an annual specialty of a Fourth of July American Number, in which American matters are discussed from various angles, by English and American writers naturally selected because of their proven friendliness to the British point of view.

It was on the fourth of July, 1918, that the American publisher, George Haven Putnam, outlined the opportunity and occasion to induce better relations between the two countries by revising the history text books regarding the American Revolution in use in the United States, to make it appear to the present generation in the American schools that the struggle for American freedom was at best a trifling incident in the world's history, for which the United States on the whole, might now be expected to apologize.

The following year the Fourth of July issue of the London Times went much farther in this direction and outlined with great detail the approved methods of British propaganda to cement Anglo-American friendship.

The stated object of the Times, London, July 4, 1920, "American Number," is that it is intended as contribution towards British understanding of "that America, which fought side by side with England"; "one feature of the number," being addressed particularly to the American people. This is the article by Viscount Bryce, in which the author of the "American Commonwealth," and former ambassador in Washington, seeks to remove "the chief cause of Anglo-American misunderstanding, the Irish question."

One general thread runs through the entire issue, a careful feeling of the American pulse by expert diagnosticians. The English writers without exception recognize the danger in the Irish situation, admit that it is inevitable, and to some extent justified—but the general trend of opinion is that once this difficulty is overcome there is little or no barrier to closer Anglo-American relations. The activities of Irish sympathizers in America receive "honorable mention." A brief summary of some of the most startling comments follows:

Comments on Irish agitation in America, from Times article, "America Revisited," by special correspondent.

1—"That it (the Irish question) is the chief obstacle to anything like universal cordiality in the feelings of the two peoples (English and American) towards each other is, of course, obvious."

2—"It is at least wholesome that Americans generally recognize clearly enough that Irish agitation as also German agitation," and "the German-Irish forces" is a common phrase on lips of Americans.

3—"The Irish camp is not merely an Irish camp, but, speaking in terms of the war, it is an enemy camp."

4—"It is not a very long way from an abstract resolution of sympathy with the Irish Republic to a resolution demanding the concession of freedom in the name of the United States."

5—"Very competent judges in the United States are of the opinion that in the not distant future Congress may be egged into action which would be practically equivalent to the issue of an ultimatum to Great Britain, action which could not fail to mean war between any two other powers. The good humor and common sense of British diplomacy may quite possibly soon be even more severely tested than they were in the Venezuelan crisis."

WHAT U. S. 'SHOULD KNOW.'

6—"That Americans in general should know much about the Irish question is hardly to be expected. Not many understand how largely the difficulty today is not one between Great Britain and Ireland but between two parts of Ireland itself.' Note. This is the keynote of Lord Bryce's article—which is a message especially designed for the American people."

The article devotes some consideration to Roman Catholic influence. It says:

"Alarm is already sufficiently aroused in the United States. One powerful Protestant Church has already made its position clear upon the Irish question. Others are very ready to follow. . . .

"Certain Roman Catholic organizations of a social or fraternal character are being particularly active, one such organization especially; and it is curious that this extreme activity is in large measure a direct outcome of the war. Among other things, that organization is using every effort to make itself indispensable to the American Legion . . . on the other hand, however, the similar Protestant organization in America are quite alive to the activity, and feeling in them is hardening very rapidly.

"One will hear the Roman Catholic influence associated with the agitation almost as frequently as one hears the association of Irish and German.

"More than once I have heard Americans discuss with great gravity and extreme foreboding the prospects of an acute religious conflict on Protestant and Roman Catholic lines in the U. S. in the near future."

It was this belief, no doubt, that inspired the Coote delegation, which apparently would not deplore such a conflict.

Hail to Eddie Hardy, Our Only Ray of Hope!

EDWARD ROCHIE HARDY

The latest prodigy to come to light is Edward Rochie Hardy, who, at the age of twelve, has just been matriculated a freshman at Columbia University. His hobby is history and he is said to be proficient in twelve languages, among them being ancient Assyrian and Babylonian.

Edward, we salute you! We hail you with delight. Our only regret is that we are approaching the twilight while you are yet in the dawn of existence, and we fear that we may not live to behold the fruition of your career.

You have a splendid start. With your knowledge of Assyrian and Babylonian it will come easy for you to master Egyptian and Sanskrit. From these to Latin and Greek is but a step. The languages that were spoken throughout the Middle Ages will be child's play for you, and to acquire mastery over Russian, Croatian, Serbian, Bulgarian, Rumanian, modern Greek, Turkish, Montenegrin, Dalmatian, Slovakian and all the other languages spoken in Europe today will be, for you, as easy as rolling off a log.

While studying these languages you must, of course, keep up your historical studies. You will find that one supplements the other. You cannot fully understand a country's history without knowing its language.

By the time you are ninety-six or ninety-seven years old you will probably have a clear idea of the historical, racial, religious, territorial and political entanglements of Europe.

And then, if this present League of Nations is still in existence and this country belongs to it, you will be thoroughly equipped to sit in its Supreme Council as our representative. We have scanned the horizon closely and we can see no one else in sight who could fill the bill.

Good luck to you, Eddie.

WEATHER STILL LIKE SUMMER

Average Temperature Well Above Average; Roses and Dahlias Bloom

Real Indian Summer weather continued to prevail in Greater Boston and the rest of southern New England today, despite the southward flight of geese and all other signs of approaching cold weather.

In one section of the city it was so warm that dahlias and roses came out in full bloom, while in Marlboro and other sections raspberries were picked.

The first twenty days of this month, according to the weather man, have been warmer than the first twenty days of any October in fourteen years, with the exception of October, 1914. The average temperature for each day this month has been about 58 degrees, six degrees higher than the normal temperature for this month.

Shortly after midnight the temperature registered 58 degrees and by 9 a. m. it had reached 62. The humidity for today up to 9 o'clock was 72 per cent.

The amount of rainfall thus far this month has been much less than during the average month of October. Only 70 hundredths of an inch has fallen thus far this month.

LAVELLE URGES TWO PLATOONS

Attorney Shows Other Cities' Approval and Cites Coolidge's Indorsement

Replying to the recent report made public by the Boston Chamber of Commerce in opposition to the two-platoon measure, Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle has issued a statement in behalf of the Boston firemen. He cites the indorsement of Governor Coolidge expressed in a letter to the president of the Russell Club after signing the "two-platoon" bill in 1918.

The statement, in part, follows:

"This report instances the cities of Chicago, Omaha and Buffalo as those in which there has been a general decrease in efficiency after the two-platoon plan was adopted. This is not true, and should not be so published even by biased men still clinging to the strict formula of opposition to the firemen of Boston.

OTHER CITIES APPROVE.

"The fire marshal of Chicago says: 'The two-platoon system is giving splendid satisfaction.'

"The chief of Buffalo fire department says: 'We have installed the two-platoon system on July 1, 1916, and have no reason to regret our action. On the contrary we are highly pleased with it, and feel that we could not return to the old system without great loss in efficiency and a possible danger.'

"The chief of the Omaha fire department says: 'In my opinion the two-platoon system is a much better system than the twenty-four-hour system. The men and their families are all better satisfied with their lot because they are receiving the same conditions given to other working classes. We would not return to the old system if we could.'

"Last year thirty-two cities and towns in Massachusetts adopted the two-platoon plan with local public opinion solidly allied with the firemen, and in no one of these municipalities has there been any reason to regret the change."

No Small Coins, Paris Beggars Must Work

Paris, Oct. 21.—The lack of small coins has done away with beggars in Paris. They have been driven to work.

"Before the cost of living went up," said M. Paul Gaulot, a student of social conditions, "a beggar used to make as much as the average workingman. He lived well and happily by simply sitting down in the street and waiting for coins to roll into his hat. Today, conditions have changed. There are no small coins; copper coins have disappeared and the paper francs or fifty centimes are not suited for street charity. Lots of people used to give a few cents to beggars, but they hesitate to give ten or twenty."

SEARLES' ESTATE $27,500,000

Walker and Delafield Seek Appointment as Temporary Administrators

New York, Oct. 21.—The estate of Edward F. Searles, which was left almost entirely to his secretary, Arthur F. Walker, totals $17,500,000, outside of holdings in Hubbard & Co., which amount to $10,000,000, according to statement made in petition to Surrogate Foley here by Walker and his attorney, Lewis L. Delafield.

The application to the surrogate asks for citations to the persons interested in the estate.

Surrogate Foley asked those interested to show cause why Walker or Delafield should not be appointed temporary administrators of the estate in New York. It was asserted that administrator was necessary in view of the contest of the will started by Searles' nephew, Victor Searles, which will not be tried until next January.

KNAPP CLEARS HAITI MARINES

Admiral Says Island Is So Bandit-Ridden U. S. Must Keep Up Occupation

Washington, Oct. 21.—So overrun is Haiti with bandits and so incapable of self-government are its people that the United States will be compelled to occupy that island for at least a generation to come, according to an official statement from Rear Admiral Harry S. Knapp, made public by Secretary Daniels.

After investigating conditions in Haiti for the State and Navy Departments, Admiral Knapp proceeded to Santo Domingo, where he is now conducting an inquiry on behalf of the government.

KILLINGS WERE "NECESSARY."

His statement was made in reply to fourteen questions submitted by Charles McKinley of Portland, Ore., and cover practically all the charges preferred against the American military and civil authorities in Haiti.

In reply to the question as to whether or not "some 300 Haitian men, women and children have been shot by American troops since 1915," Admiral Knapp said:

"During the necessary military operations that have taken place, it is very possible that 300 Haitian men may have been killed. These operations were necessary to restore order and respect for human life and property that were endangered by the Haitians themselves. Especially in the northwestern parts of Haiti, which has been the stronghold of Haitian bandits called 'cacos.'

PEACEFUL AT PRESENT.

"There has been intermittent fighting between the troops of the occupation, assisted by the gendarmerie d'Haiti and these bandit bands. This culminated some months ago in an intensive campaign to put an end to these conditions of disorder, and the country is now peaceful and conditions of good order obtain practically throughout."

Engagement Rings

The buying of an engagement ring is one of the happiest purchases a man ever makes, and it calls for the greatest care in selection. Not only must the stone be the finest obtainable for the money, but the setting should be one which will not be affected by the fads and fashions of future years.

The charm of beautiful diamonds cannot be adequately expressed. For many years they have been the accepted stones for engagement rings. The solitaire settings of today are of rare beauty and offer a great variety of choice.

Our firm has sold engagement rings for one hundred and twenty years. We are fortunate in having this background of experience to place at the disposal of the young men of today. We "know" diamonds. We can judge quite accurately the setting which will please ten years from now.

We shall be glad to have you examine our rings. You will find the stones of good color, carefully cut and well mounted. The settings of our rings offer a wide range of choice.

$10,122 SPENT IN PONZI CASE

Receivers Report Cash Balance of $182,915.80 on Hand; "Investors" Give Up $787.50

The bankruptcy receivers for Charles Ponzi have thus far expended $10,122.53 in clearing up the tangled affairs of the defunct promoter, according to their preliminary report to Judge Morton of the United States District Court.

They announced that their total cash collections have reached $192,038.33, which, deducting the expenditures, leaves a balance of $182,915.80. Voluntary payment of $787.50 in Ponzi "profits" have been made to them, the report states.

Aside from the Ponzi cash in their possession, the receivers hold three certificates of deposit in the Hanover Trust Company amounting to $1,054,221.93. They also hold, according to the statement, notes of the J. R. Poole Company for $115,900, and a note of "Johnson" for $2,000.

Get Busy, Girls! Halloween Is Near

Future Husband Can Be Seen in Glass, Many Are Told

The night approaches when any young woman in New England may see the face of her Future Husband, if she will walk backwards down the cellar stairs at midnight, with a small mirror in one hand and a lighted candle in the other. Ask anybody!

Walking down stairs with candle.

As Halloween this year comes on Sunday, October 31, many young people will celebrate it on Saturday. But the witches probably will hold fast to the calendar. There never was anybody so fussy about the letter as well as the spirit as a witch.

In almost every neighborhood in New England Halloween parties are being planned. They are more elaborate than they used to be, although the decorations and favors so much in use nowadays can be bought for a very modest sum. All that the small boy of a generation ago needed to make Halloween a success was a nail and a long string.

SPORTS OF CHILDHOOD.

The nail end of the outfit was fastened to somebody's cottage window. The operator—at a safe distance—so manipulated his string that the nail played "tick-tack" on the window and—he convinced himself—scared everybody in the house into conniption fits.

If there wasn't a nail handy, or a fellow was "too tired," it was almost as much fun to pull doorbells and run. You know what people think when the doorbell rings on Halloween, and they go to the door, and there isn't anybody there. Nine out of ten of 'em say "Ghosts!" The tenth—or is it the other way around?—say: "Drat those boys! If there was a policeman in this town worth a pinch o' salt, he'd——"

But say, we are grown up, now, and not at all interested in the pranks of mischievous boys. Say our interest now is in a Halloween party. Where is the best place to stage it and what are some interesting games?

The best place in the world for a Halloween party is a cellar. In suburban districts, barns are held in high favor. Phosphorescent paint can be used to advantage on cellar walls. Use as many mirrors as you can. Pumpkin lanterns, witches and cats make the right sort of decorations.

"Giant Hostess"

A good idea is to have the guests welcomed to the party by a "giant" hostess who sits on top of a stepladder at one end of the goblins' cave and —in sepulchral tones, of course—bids everybody welcome. The "giant" and the stepladder are draped in sheets. Other members of the receiving party also are dressed as ghosts.

IDEAL FOR "FORTUNES."

There isn't any other night in the year to compare with this for fortune telling. Be sure to pick out the most bashful boys and girls and tell their fortunes. Let somebody pose as the "gypsy fortune teller." Provide her with saucers. In the saucers place: 1, a bit of green cloth; 2, a scrap of blue; 3, a handful of moss; 4, a spray of thorn; 5, a cord tied in a double knot; 6, some clear water; 7, a twig with twisted ends.

Blindfold the [illegible] who is to have his or her fortune told. Turn him or her three times round. If he or she touches moss, a life of luxury; thorn, unhappy love; blue cloth, naval profession, a sailor husband; green, an army husband profession; forked stick, fate in the form of a widow or widower; clear water, single blessedness; double knot, marriage near.

Or, let us try story-telling. At the midnight hour turn out every light (don't be such a 'fraidcat, Melissa!) and ask the players to sit in a circle. Provide beforehand a large ball of different colored yarns. Holding the ball of yarn the hostess begins by telling some weird story, unwinding the yarn as she proceeds, until she comes to a different colored yarn. Then she tosses the ball to someone else in the circle, who continues the story as he unwinds the ball. When his color ends, he tosses it on.

HELPS FIND MATE.

The most useful thing about Holloween, of course, is that it helps you to find out whom you are going to marry. One of the simplest ways to do this is fill a pumpkin rind with nuts which have first been opened and then "fates" or tokens. Cover the stuffed nuts with ribbons. Those drawing ribbons of the same color are partners. All the nuts contain prophecies. The one who gets a ring will be "married next;" a coin, will be the most wealthy; a thimble is destined to be a bachelor or spinster.

In Ireland, a generation or two ago, "callcannon" was popular at Halloween parties. Made of mashed potatoes, parsnip and chopped onions, a ring is buried in it, and the one who finds the ring in his or her portion will be married in a year; if already married, he or she will be lucky in the year.

OLD-TIME CUSTOMS.

Twelve clods of earth are taken from a churchyard. A candle is put on each. As it burns steady, wavers or goes out, so will be the fortunes of those for whom candles are named.

A ball of blue yarn was thrown out of a window and a girl then wound it back, saying the Creed backward. When she has nearly finished, she expected the yarn to be held. She would ask, "Who holds?" and the window would whisper back her future husband's name.

An old Scottish game called for three "luggies," bowls with handles like the Druid lamps, one of which was filled with clean water, one with dirty water, and one left empty. The person wishing to know his fate in matrimony was blindfolded, turned about thrice and then put down his left hand. If he dipped it into clean water, he would marry a maiden; if into dirty water, a widow, and if into the empty dish, not at all.

Find husband in bowls of letters

Parties Will Test Best Traditions of the Night

TEST MADE BY FIRE.

In England nuts were put in a fire after being named after girl and men courters. If they burn quietly they will live happily. If they are restless there is trouble ahead.

"These glowing nuts are emblems true
Of what in human life we view."

On the Isle of Man stemless apples are floated in a tub and must be seized by teeth if youth's love is to be successful. Sometimes the apples have names hidden in them.

As the clock strikes midnight, in one of the Halloween games they play in Newfoundland, a girl puts twenty-six letters into a white bowl which has been kissed by an old woman and a baby. She repeats verses, picks out as many letters as there are in her name and constructs the name of her future husband from them.

But these are only a few suggestions. More, and perhaps better ones, will be made by almost any sweet and elderly woman of your acquaintance. The thing to do is have a Halloween party. Get busy!

Are You Losing Your Grip on Health?

Physician's Prescription to Increase the Health and Strength of Anaemic, Run-down Men and Women

As a result of the tremendous strain of modern living so many people find that the nerve cells have become devitalized, the whole system weakened and thousands of men and women are today losing their grip on health simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of iron. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body and enables the blood to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run-down they might readily build up their red blood corpuscles and quickly become stronger and healthier in every way. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength of weak, nervous, "run-down" men and women in two weeks' time in many instances. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Nuxated Iron is on sale at all good druggists.

The Governor of Massachusetts Indorses Two Platoons for Boston Firemen

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

November 3, 1919.

Mr. Daniel J. Looney,
President Russell Club,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Mr. Looney:

I am very glad indeed to have opportunity of presenting to your club assembled together tonight, one of the reasons that the legislative year just passed has been particularly fruitful to the firemen.

I signed the so-called "Two-Platoon" Bill in the face of the opposition of the Mayors of practically every city in the Commonwealth, and particularly of the authorities of the City of Boston, because I felt it was a humanitarian measure and in the long run would benefit the citizens of the communities in which the firemen enjoyed the privileges that this bill provided. It is not always an easy thing to make a law in view of such opposition no matter how meritorious, when the municipal authorities are pretty generally against it. It was my pleasure to do this because I felt it was right and best for all.

I sincerely hope the members of this club may enjoy the privileges my act made possible for them.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) CALVIN COOLIDGE

HELD AS $10,000 NEWTON THIEF

Charge James Muldoon of Brooklyn Also Robbed Brighton Residence

Charged by the police with being wanted in Newton for breaking into homes in that city and stealing property valued at over $10,000, James Muldoon of Brooklyn, N. Y., was arrested by police headquarters inspectors, as the man who forced an entrance to the home of James Phelan, No. 11 Chiswick road, Brighton.

It is claimed by the police that Muldoon has confessed taking a gold watch and chain, valued at $150 from the Phelan house.

Muldoon operated by posing as a telephone inspector, the police claim. He would go to a house, show a badge and state he had been sent to inspect the phone and wires. Then he would loot the residence.

Effort is being made to link him with the robbing of the residence of Louis K. Liggett, from whom $10,000 in jewelry was taken, and the home of John Moyer, Chestnut Hill, from which jewelry worth $8,000 was stolen. In each of these robberies the thief posed as a telephone inspector.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

TRAIN YOUR HAIR AS AN ACTRESS DOES

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. The majority say that to have the best hair wash and scalp stimulator at a cost of about three cents, one need only get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are quickly dissolved and entirely disappear when you rinse the hair. After this your hair will be so fluffy it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Advertisement.

If you have not yet tried the new way, the silmerine way, by all means do so. You'll never again use the ruinous heated iron. The curliness will appear so perfectly natural and the hair will be so beautifully lustrous, instead of dried and parched. Thus liquid silmerine serves also as a beneficial dressing for the hair. It is neither sticky nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use. It should be applied with a clean tooth brush before putting up the hair, drawing the brush through the hair from root to tip.

The hair will have the loveliest curls and waves imaginable in three hours, and it will be easy to manage, no matter how you do it up. A few ounces of the liquid from your druggist will last a long time.—Advertisement.

JENNIE IS A WOMAN HATER

One of the things nobody out at the Franklin Park Zoo can explain about Jennie, the owl-faced monkey, is why she does not like women and girls.

Let everything in trousers—be they knee-length or so long that they have to be turned up at trousers bottoms—approach Jennie and the lady "monk" is all gentleness and friendliness.

But girls and women! Jennie has no use for them. She does not trust them. Even when they proffer goodies, the owl-faced monkey is likely to snap at them. Why?

Jennie comes from Paraguay. True to her owl-face, she does not like the daylight. She prefers dark corners. As monkeys go, she is charming. Her fur coat is green-gray above and orange underneath. Her huge eyes are the color of ripe chestnuts.

Is Marriage a Success?

This Girl Takes Rap at 1920 Boys

Marriage Editor: Is marriage a success? Yes, one out of a thousand, which only helps to discourage the average sensible girl. As for myself, I never intend to be married. Not because I want to be an old maid—No! I don't! No girl wants to be an old maid, any more than she wants to marry a brute. But what I have seen of my friends' and sister's experience makes me decide marriage is a failure. The fellow of today doesn't care who or what she is, so long as she looks good (though it takes a whole drugstore to do it), and makes a good show for him. I am a young girl, considered good-looking, dress up-to-date (but I know the limit); but I am disgusted with the boys, as they don't seem to show any good taste or commonsense nowadays.

TWENTY-TWO.

Miss Jean Archibald, young author of the comedy, "Call the Doctor," today gives her views on the marriage question for the Boston American. Read what she has to say, also what readers have to tell of their own experiences. Write your own views or experiences to

THE MARRIAGE EDITOR.

By JEAN ARCHIBALD

I have followed with the keenest interest the American's lively and enlightening discussion, "Is Marriage a Success?" There is no more timely subject on earth.

I want to encourage and congratulate the American for launching into this mighty subject with such great freedom and sincerity.

I was a marriage doctor. I have never been married, but the majority of my friends are married. They have come to me with their grievances; both real and imagined. Sometimes when they begin to enumerate their husbands' shortcomings I simply agree with them. "Of course, he's a brute!"—"How dreadful!" This always works! They say, "Well—now, really Charles has a good reason for that; And—he really didn't mean it the way it sounds!"

And they straighten up with pride in that same pestiferous husband's virtues. It's all employing the horse sense of psychology.

The other phase of the marriage question which interests me is the children. Why are so many of our most intelligent and prosperous young couples neglecting children? On the part of the woman it seems brazen and unspeakable. There is springing up a class of women today with more money and time than they know how to employ, and they never once think of children. They are selfish, egotistical and independent. And then when the slightest thing mars their happiness they fly to the divorce courts.

There ought to be a law compelling people to have children or to adopt the children of the poor. They say, "We cannot afford it." They are afraid of sacrifice. They are primarily selfish and lazy.

The "marriage doctor" would prescribe children, too, which in myriads of cases solidifies the union of a man and wife so that nothing could destroy it.

LETTER OF SYMPATHY.

To the railroad man's wife:

Dear madam: I read your statement with much interest because it is a case so typically illustrating the selfish and brutally animal nature of some, perhaps the majority of men. My impression of you is that you are a kind, dutiful and loving woman who is hungering for just a little deserved respect and love from an easily satiated man, who lacks the fine element which some men fortunately have. Most men are actuated to a great degree by the sex instinct in marriage. When that is taken care of, there is no further interest in it for them. They are ignorant of the nobler and higher strains that characterize a true love, as distinguished from a purely physical love, which is never lasting.

The desire for congenial companionship, for the communication of one's thoughts to a sympathetic mind, the worship of woman because of her more beautiful soul, because "a thing of beauty is a joy forever," are not to be found as a rule among men.

Your husband, madam, is the kind that seeks to satisfy his own physical nature without regard for human feeling, moral standards, and in ignorance of duty that must be complied with against one's own inner wishes. He therefore lacks that refinement that makes some men better than most. He has not hesitated to make your life unhappy, and so has violated the sacredness of the marriage bond. He is a worthless scoundrel, undeserving of your love.

You are young. Do not waste your precious life with him. There are other and better men, who would care for you sufficiently to give their time and effort in your behalf. Put the question directly before him. Don't be afraid. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain. If he won't meet you half way, leave him, to live your life in a clearer and brighter atmosphere, unpolluted by the rottenness and unfaithfulness of a human animal. I am a young man who expects to marry, bearing in mind that I shall live my life at least 50 per cent for my sweetheart.

TWENTY-ONE.

MARRY YOUR "OWN KIND."

Marriage Editor: Is marriage a success? Well, I'll say it is if you marry the right and your own kind. I'm a Russian, and when I was sixteen I married a Yankee and lived happily for one year until I told my husband that I was to become a mother. Well, he went and left me and later I got word that he was killed in France.

Then for two years I worked to support myself and my baby until I got a letter from my father in the country to come and live with him. (My mother has been dead seven years.) I went on a Sunday. On a Monday I met a Russian fellow. We went out a couple of evenings, and on a Saturday we were married. I never dreamed I would be as happy as I am now—and why? Because I married my own kind.

There is not a thing he or I do without telling each other first, and it's three years now. We have another little child, and he thinks the world of both of them; always treats them the same. I read your paper week days and Sundays; I don't care for any other but the Boston American.

S. A. B.

Milford.

"A WRETCHED FARCE."

Marriage Editor: Is marriage a success? Yes—every time I spend a week-end with my friend who has been married ten years I KNOW it is. And every time I go to my own home, I know marriage is a failure—a wretched farce.

If you are interested in my first assertion, say so through the American, and I will tell just why "Yes" is crowded into every wall and beam of that home. And if you are unfortunate enough to be living the farce, whose traps at every turn you yourself set and [illegible] answer M. N. V. through the Boston American.

M. N. V.

ONE WIFE'S PROBLEM

Marriage Editor: Being a constant reader of the Boston American I would like to tell you about my case. I am twenty-six years of age, having been married almost four years. Before I was married my mother was very strict; I could not take a step without asking, and her answer nine times out of ten was "No!"

Well, I was in love, very much in love with a fellow that I was engaged to. He was a good type of fellow, but the few times I went out with him there was a "calling down" for both of us from mother, and the fellow got sick and tired of it. He went out with others and I stayed behind, heartbroken.

I met my husband a few months after. Knowing I could not have the one I really loved, I thought he would make a good husband, so I married him. To say the truth, although he is very good in every way to me, I do not love him. I will not let him see it, but my life is a sad one. I am mother of two children, and shall try very hard to make their lives happier than mine has been.

"Longing for the One I Love."

BANKERS RUSH SPEAKERS WEST

Pro-Wilson Campaign Train to Make Dozen Stops on Way to Coast

Indianapolis, Oct. 21.—Political eyes of the country were turned on Indianapolis tonight with the arrival of a special train from New York bearing pro-Wilson League speakers. The train was sent out, according to word received here, by a group of powerful New York business men, deeply interested in European finances. It will go to the Pacific coast.

The list of speakers aboard the train is headed by Prof. Irving Fisher, Herbert Parsons, Secretary of War Baker, Charlotte Perkins Gilman and Col. Charles Whittlesey.

While the full itinerary has not been announced, it is said the train will stop in a dozen cities en route to California.

"It is evident this is a last minute effort of international financiers to stem the tide toward Harding," was the comment at Republican headquarters. "It is the final effort to bring support to Cox as the champion of the Versailles covenant, including Article X.

Magnates conspicuously engaged in business [illegible] to war making in [illegible] declared to be active members of this group. It is [illegible] primarily to divert the public mind from the shortcomings of the Wilson administration and to appeal for vindication of the Wilson League and his work in behalf of it."

Explains Mystery of Sacrament

The Rev. Father Reginald, in his fourth lecture to non-Catholics in the monastery chapel at Brighton, answering the question, "Is Christ really present in the Blessed Sacrament?" said:

"We believe that Christ is really present in this great sacrament, because He has said it. We believe whatever Christ says, no matter how far it may be above our understanding; because He is God as well as man; because He has worked miracles, which no mere man can do and which only God can work. By those miracles Christ gave us the most convincing proof that He is God, and that nothing is impossible to Him.

"Therefore when He says, 'This is my body; this is my blood,' although we see only the appearance of bread and wine, we are not unreasonably credulous, but most reasonable and logical in believing that the body and blood of Christ are substantially present under those appearances."

FREE DRY AGENT WHO SLEW MAN

Detectives Wait Outside New York Court to Arrest Him for Violating Jail Parole

New York, Oct. 21.—Stewart N. McMullin, prohibition enforcement agent, was acquitted here of murdering Harry Carlton, a chauffeur and bootlegger. McMullin was charged with having shot down Carlton while the latter had his hands in the air and while his head was turned away from McMullin. The prohibition enforcement agent pleaded that he killed Carlton in self-defence in line of duty.

Immediately after the verdict McMullin was informed that two detectives were waiting outside of the court house to arrest him for breaking a parole in Indiana. The detectives had a warrant charging that McMullin was paroled from the Indiana State prison after serving four years and five months of an eight-year sentence, and that he violated his parole by taking part in a highway robbery in Westchester County, New York, for which he was sent to Sing Sing.

The Indiana authorities insist McMullin must return to Michigan City and serve the rest of his unexpired term. McMullin was taken to the office of United States Marshal McCarthy for formal discharge from United States custody.

SCHOOL TANGLE IN MEDFORD

Aldermen Committee to Hear Cases Arising Out of Building of New Schoolhouse

As a result of the filing of suits against the city of Medford in connection with the erection of the Fulton Heights schoolhouse and because of delay in completing the building two committees of the Medford Board of Aldermen will meet later in the week in an effort to straighten out the tangle and they will have before them the school board and several city officials.

The original appropriation of $50,000 for the building has been increased to $75,000 and the Mayor seeks an additional $25,000 to complete the structure. He declares that if the money is forthcoming at once the building will be ready for occupancy February 1. The aldermen have not yet reported on the final $25,000 and while the special committee on schoolhouses has held a hearing on the matter it has never made a report and the matter has not yet been to the finance committee.

Suits from dissatisfaction of awards in land taking for the building have been filed by Frank A. Stevens, owner of several lots, in the Middlesex County courts. Meanwhile, Mr. Stevens threatens to bring two more suits one for trespass, owing to the fact that long before the land takings were made, construction work on the school had started, also for land damages to other lots which he owns nearby, declaring the city has dumped quantities of debris upon them. Mr. Stevens will be heard by the committee on claims of the Board of Aldermen, in an effort to effect an adjustment of the situation.

The construction of the Fulton Heights schoolhouse on a cost-plus-ten-per-cent basis, the first schoolhouse ever to be erected on that basis by a municipality, has delayed the housing of scores of children in the northeasterly section of Medford.

SWARMS OF SAVAGE RATS INFEST THE LEVIATHAN

New York, Oct. 21.—Swarms of rats, savage by starvation, are fighting and eating one another on the steamship Leviathan, tied up at the Hoboken docks. Cats aboard the liner were driven off by the vicious rats. Fumigation failed and now the quarantine officials are trying starvation tactics.

Not a particle of food had been permitted aboard the boat for weeks. For a time the rodents feasted on the leather cushions and fittings, and now, faced with no other alternative, the rats are fast exterminating themselves.

WARNS OF ANTHRAX IN CHEAP SHAVING BRUSHES

A warning against anthrax, one of the most deadly diseases known to science and the germs of which lurk in cheap shaving brushes, was issued by Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, State Commissioner of Health, today. Dr. Kelley said that since the war cheap shaving brushes had been made in large quantities with hair imported from countries where the deadly disease prevails. He urged all owners of such brushes to burn them immediately and procure brushes of a better quality.

BEAUTY ADMITS GAY PARTIES

Rutland, Vt., Oct. 21.—Swaying from side to side in the witness box Mrs. Alexander C. Mason of this city, striving to overcome the grief which at intervals made her speechless, told in simple words her story in the $25,000 alienation suit brought by her husband, a well known insurance agent, against Michael Dugan, a wealthy retired liquor dealer.

The witness, who is regarded as one of the most beautiful women in this city, caused a stir as she swept through the crowded courtroom and took the stand to testify in the defendant's behalf. Petite, demure, with eyes that flashed malignantly at the counsel for the plaintiff, she held the courtroom spellbound for three hours, describing her seven [illegible] visits to the saloon of the defendant to [illegible] liquor for her own and her husband's use.

HELD BOOZE PARTIES.

She related how she and her husband had on several occasions participated in 'booze' parties, both in the city and out.

'On one Sunday,' she said, "my husband played poker in the house and we drank a little."

"What did he do in the afternoon?" was the question.

"He passed the plate at the Congregational Church."

TALKED ABOUT MOTHS.

On cross examination she was severely grilled on the question of her many trips to the Dugan saloon.

She admitted that she had stayed in the [illegible] as long as one hour at a time. "I [illegible] and drank."

[illegible]

Was the [illegible] lighted?

"It was [illegible] was illuminated by an [illegible] light in front and by lights coming from two garages one on each side of the building," witness said.

It appears that the defense in the case is that Mrs. Mason's visits [illegible] were witnessed by detectives, but that she made them for the sole purpose of obtaining liquor.

Flour

as good as the best you have ever used

BEFORE the days of Bond Bread—when you had to bake your own bread—how particular you were about your flour!

Experience had taught you that only certain high grades of flour would make your bread white, firm, deliciously wholesome.

We could not afford to substitute the lower grades of flour in Bond Bread—even tho it might save thousands of dollars each month.

For the sake of Bond Bread's "home-made" goodness—we have to set the standards that we require—and analyze each lot of flour—and buy only the finest flour in the land.

Flour is only one item.

Purest milk, lard, sugar, yeast, salt and water—all free from substitutes—that is what Bond Bread is made of.

How a "flapper" looks to a woman of ninety

A woman of ninety, who has seen four generations of flappers, encounters the irrepressible young woman of 1920!

In Mrs. Harland's youth, the properly brought up young woman blushed—today it would take a hardy blush to penetrate the "complexion" that is so universally worn. Then it was genteel to faint—now it is sporting to face anything with a nonchalance of a receiving teller.

Off they rush in their too short skirts and their too low waists dabbing on their complexions as they go. "Self-expression" leads them to strange extremes but this young woman of ninety finds it in her heart to love and understand them.

A group of unusual short stories

Here are six real stories—six stories! Every one of them vivid, unusual—the type of short story you have come to expect in Pictorial Review.

The story of a striker's wife. Read "Paying the Piper" by Charles Caldwell Dobie.

What would people say? What would they think?

Was that hushed family scandal lifting its head again? Unbelievable, intolerable—its price had been paid years ago!

Kathleen Norris takes you into the life of New York's Four Hundred. Brilliant, intimate, powerfully written, it is a revealing portrait of the young society girl of today—the sober world of work—and through it all that baffling entangling question—to whom did the girl belong?

Two women knew—and would not speak. Two men rushed blindly on, loving her—the cultured sensitive gentlemen and the earnest young mechanic. Where could she find happiness, this girl with the conflicting blood of two worlds in her veins?

"THE BELOVED WOMAN"

by Kathleen Norris

Was John Cummings justified in leaving his wife?

She was a good woman. She was kind to her children. And she was a perfect housekeeper. Even had handstitched hems on all her curtains. Kept her home spick and span. And yet John went. Why did he go away with that other woman? Just what made him desert his wife? John said she was such a good housekeeper she didn't know how to make a home. He wanted companionship.

But he had to go out to get it.

Now before you get mad with John read what Montanye Perry says about him. Mrs. Perry has been keeping tabs on the neighbors in her own town, and she isn't quite sure that John wasn't halfway right.

There's an awful jolt for a lot of "good" wives in her article in Pictorial Review for November entitled "When is a wife not a wife?"

Do you know where the waist-line will be this winter?

Do you know the proper width for skirts?

The November Pictorial Review contains the forecast of Winter fashions. The newest and most charming styles are shown, with descriptions of the favored fabrics and valuable little hints concerning trimming and accessories.

This is to be a season of straight lines and gay embroideries. The moyen-age dress, with its simple lines and long waist-line promises to hold the first place in the popular favor.

100 MEN QUIT TELEGRAPH KEY

Wholesale Resignations of Postal Operators, Who Seek More Pay, Is Predicted

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Wholesale resignation of operators employed by the Postal Telegraph Company was predicted today by approximately 100 operators, who resigned and walked out of the Chicago office of that company last night.

The men said they quit because two of their number had been discharged without cause and because salary paid is so small it does not permit them to live according to American standards. They said the maximum salary was but $143 per month.

At international headquarters of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union here it was said no strike had been called.

"We have known for some time the Postal men were dissatisfied," said one union official. "The competing companies are paying on an average $40 per month more than the Postal. And besides the Postal operators have to furnish their own typewriters. We have not called a strike and, in fact, have been trying to hold the men in line."

PREMIER'S IRISH POLICY UPHELD

Lloyd George 'Reprisals' Stand Indorsed in Parliament by 346 to 79 Vote

London, Oct. 21.—Lloyd George's Irish policy was upheld when the government refused to open an independent inquiry into the reprisals in Ireland, by a vote of 346 to 79 in the House of Commons. It was stated by Bonar Law that the government is merely undertaking an inquiry of each military or police outrage.

Answering an attack of the anti-Lloyd George faction on the government in the House of Lords for its failure to put an end to the reprisals, Lord Curzon gave as the reason for the government's refusal to investigate that "every Sinn Feiner perjures his soul fifty times in order to get the blood of a policeman."

During the debate on the Irish situation in the House of Commons, Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, declared that he knows hundreds of republican assassins and will track every one of them down. He added that the government would search Ireland east, west, north and south, for arms.

BOSTON AMERICAN

LOVELIEST GIRL

CONTEST

Will Be Published

Next Monday

The American offers $5,000 in gold for photographs of lovely girls. To the girl declared by a representative board of judges to be the loveliest girl in New England the American will pay $3,000 in gold. To the next in merit, $1,000 in gold. There will be two third prizes of $500 each.

In awarding these prizes the judges will have in mind Mr. Arthur Brisbane's definition of beauty. Mr. Brisbane says beauty is "intelligence in a fine setting." The judges will study the photographs, first, for intelligence; second, for health, and, third, for physical beauty.

The American's $5,000 will not be awarded to the beauty that consists of pink cheeks that fade, heavy long eyelashes that fall out, curly hair that grows thin, bright eyes that years make dim.

Outside appearance will be taken into consideration, but first in the estimation of the judges will come intelligence that shows in the face, in the line of the forehead, the shape of the head, the earnestness of expression.

There are no puzzles to be solved, no mysteries to be unraveled, no pestering of your friends to subscribe for something. Send in your photograph and the judges will do the rest. The capital prize of $3,000 in gold may be yours for the small cost of a photograph, plus the price of postage stamps.

Some modest young friend of yours may be entitled to the capital prize of $3,000 and yet reluctant to submit HER OWN picture. Send it in ON HER BEHALF. Three thousand dollars is a lot of money. Enough to pay for a college course, go into business, go a long way toward paying for a home. The OTHER prizes are "worth having."

We would suggest to all who may be interested, on their own behalf or on behalf of friends, that they ACT IMMEDIATELY. Address photographs—which will be returned to you in good condition—to Loveliest Girl Editor, Boston American, P. O. Box 239, Boston 8, Mass. Write the NAME AND ADDRESS OF THE GIRL on the back of the picture. ADD YOUR OWN NAME AND ADDRESS.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Advertisement.

EAT and Get Thin

This is turning an old saying face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat; opposed to physical exertion; fond of the table and its good things, and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, go to your druggist (or write to the Marmola Co., 96 Garfield Building, Detroit, Mich.) and give him, (or send them) one dollar, thus satisfying your ambition for a trim, slim figure, by receiving a good size box of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription); take one of these pleasant candy tablets after each meal and at bedtime, and you [illegible] lose your fat at the rate of two, three [illegible] four pounds a week.

Then continue the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmola Prescription Tablets are not only harmless but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or weakening exercises. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

GIRLS! MAKE A LEMON BLEACH

Lemons Whiten and Double Beauty of the Skin

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White which can be had at any drug store, shake well and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach for few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty of your skin.

Famous stage beauties use lemon juice to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion. Lemons have always been used as a freckle, sunburn and tan remover. Make this up and try it.—Advertisement.

How to Rid the Arms of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required. Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.—Advertisement.

ESPERANTO TO SAIL MONDAY

Crew of 25 for Great Race Includes Nine Captains and Other Veterans of the Sea

Gloucester, Oct. 21.—The fishing schooner Esperanto, hope of citizens of Gloucester in the coming international race for the championship of the North Atlantic fishing boats, will round Eastern Point on Monday bound for Halifax, N. S., to compete in the series, the first of which is to be sailed a week from Saturday.

Captain Marty Welch, who will command her in the race, has completed the selection of his crew of 25 men, who include some of the greatest fishermen who have ever visited the Grand Banks.

NINE OF CREW CAPTAINS

Nine of the crew are captains of vessels which have sailed out of Gloucester in past years. The remainder are dyed-in-the-wool salts who fear nothing in the shape of weather the North Atlantic can produce.

The members of the crew are:

Captain Welch and Captain Charles Harty, the latter having commanded the Esperanto on her maiden trip in 1913, have personally superintended the stowing of every piece of iron ballast placed in her hold.

Veterans of the sea give them the reputation of knowing where each piece should go in order that the vessel may show her greatest speed.

SCHOONER HAULED OUT.

The schooner has been hauled out on the Parkhurst marine railway, and will be thoroughly scraped and painted and trimmed for the contest.

Word has reached here from Halifax that the crew of the competing schooner Delawana is to be composed of all skippers. Captain Thomas Himmelman, her master, will be at the wheel during the races.

Many fishing boats and auxiliary schooners are being chartered by those who plan to attend the race. In a telegram received here P. R. Duffy, president of the Colonial Fisheries, Ltd., said that he will be at Halifax during the race and will make the presentation of the cup to the winning captain. This cup will be donated by President Duffy's company.

The oil-coat on the beard

The problem in shaving, and the cause of faulty methods, now solved by Palmolive Shaving Cream. Hot towels and finger-rubbing eliminated

This is to acquaint you with a new kind of shave. A shave such as you've never before known.

Send us no money. Simply mark and mail the free coupon. We will send you a trial tube of Palmolive Shaving Cream free and post-paid.

You simply put a bit of the cream on your face, whisk it up into a lather with the wet brush—and your beard is ready for the razor!

Quick action

Every hair of the beard has an oil-coat. Palmolive lather instantly emulsifies that oil. Then the beard—a horny substance—quickly absorbs the water. It absorbs 15 per cent of water within one minute after lathering. And that makes a wiry beard wax-like.

Hot towels, which make the skin tender, are not needed with Palmolive. Neither is finger rubbing, which means delay just when men are most in a hurry.

Both lather and lotion

This lather is creamy and tenacious. It stays moist and foamy 10 minutes.

Palmolive is also a lotion. It contains palm and olive oils. So the tenderest face requires no other application.

BIG SQUAD ON WAY TO BOSTON

Players Feel Sure of Favorable Outcome of Saturday's Game in Stadium

By JARVIS HUNTING.

Danville, Ky., Oct. 21.—"Uncle" Charley put his boys aboard the Harvard Special early today.

"Bo" and the two "Reds" and twenty-six other members of the football squad of this mountain college, that hasn't tasted a gridiron defeat in four years were in the party. It was a quiet group of [illegible] seen when a college football squad [illegible] for an out of town contest [illegible] quiet a party [illegible] realized [illegible] still greater fame or [illegible] may rest on their efforts in the Harvard Stadium.

[illegible] TOWNSPEOPLE ON TRIP.

Nearly 200 of the townsfolk accompanied them and the whole town was at the Danville station to see them off [illegible] Southern gentlemen of the [illegible] school, fair [illegible] daughters of [illegible] pure whites and darkies of [illegible] ages, and [illegible] shades and tints, their white teeth gleaming at the un[illegible] spectacle.

All reverently bowed their heads as prayers were offered for the safety of the team en route and for their success in Saturday's game with the mighty team of Harvard. Then [illegible] a tremendous [illegible] organized cheer that reverberated [illegible] long after the special had moved out of sight.

CENTRE TO OFFER ITS ALL.

Centre College will offer [illegible] Saturday's game with Harvard. It is no longer a secret [illegible] team [illegible] the Harvard scouts who attended last Saturday's contest with Transylvania [illegible] townsfolk were aware of that fact before the game had [illegible]. The customarily smooth working plays got underway in a [illegible] fashion. "Red" Roberts, heretofore an outstanding star and always in every play of the game, was obviously loafing during [illegible] Saturday's contest and his punting was [illegible] exhibition [illegible] ever has given. "Bo" McMillin, All American quarterback, was not in the game and [illegible] defensive strength was absent [illegible] forward passing [illegible] Transylvania probably was the most [illegible] to Harvard scouts [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] employed by the [illegible] games.

[illegible] Charley Moran is keeping [illegible] the matter of tactics and just how he will play his team in the Harvard game is up [illegible] the Centre-West Virginia game last year he saved his best stuff [illegible] second half and despite the fact the West Virginia team gained [illegible] in the contest [illegible] allow the team to uncover [illegible] offence until the second period and on this strategy [illegible] West Virginia off its feet [illegible] down the field.

IN GAME UNTIL END.

There is one thing certain about the game in the Stadium and that is that Centre [illegible] if [illegible] beaten will [illegible] the final whistle had [illegible] college spirit [illegible] proved whenever it has [illegible] Give an opposing team [illegible] and instead of [illegible] as many teams do, Centre [illegible] sterner, harder fights.

Harvard's [illegible] suggestion that Centre engage [illegible] easy opponents during the weeks preceding the Stadium game [illegible] to [illegible] team [illegible] offered offensive strength that [illegible] the defensive [illegible] of the Centre players.

PROVED WORTH LAST YEAR.

However, those who were members of last season's great eleven, and such is the case with the majority of the men who will face Harvard, proved [illegible] defensive worth in the 1919 West Virginia game when they stopped the powerful attack of the latter and many times held the celebrated Rodgers for no gains. The fact that [illegible] was not able to do so and [illegible] Harvard could only tie Princeton [illegible] that the team will not be [illegible] when it comes to opposing the Harvard attack.

The trip to Cambridge is being made by the way of Cincinnati and Cleveland, and thence directly East over the New York Central and Boston & Albany to Boston. The team is due at the latter city at noon tomorrow.

CENTRE'S STAR LEADER

New Year's Day Game Real Practice Contest

Harvard correspondents [illegible] spoken of [illegible] game as [illegible] Harvard [illegible] approaching [illegible] but so far [illegible] members [illegible] are concerned [illegible] served [illegible] Day at Pasadena.

Unless our information is incorrect, the Centre College eleven will offer much the same type of football [illegible] sweeping off-tackle plays with barrels of interference, constituting the chief offensive feature and short and [illegible]

Had Harvard's ends proved unequal to the task, however, as Harvard's new ends may prove against [illegible] at Pasadena [illegible] at the same time checking the short forward passes.

The defensive formation used [illegible] Havemeyer, the centre, from [illegible] the line and stationed [illegible] two or three yards back of the left tackle, and brought Arnold Horween from his usual position at defensive halfback and stationed him in relatively the same position behind the right tackle. This formation had all the appearance of a sure fire stopper for off-tackle charges and because of the none too strong [illegible] of this season's ends it seems more than likely that "Bo" and one of the "Reds" will find such a problem confronting them when they seek to [illegible] outside the Crimson tackles.

Harvard Prepares to Welcome Centre

Harvard is extending arms of welcome to all Centre College men, players and graduates alike, during their stay in town. The governing board of the Harvard Union has sent a telegram to Dr. William A. Garfield, president of Centre College, inviting all Centre men to make their headquarters at the Union.

A reception committee will meet the special train at the South Station tomorrow afternoon [illegible] tickets will be presented to Captain "Bo" McMillin to be distributed among the players and fans.

A buffet lunch will be served in the Union from noon until 2 o'clock for seventy-five cents a head and after the game a tea dance will be given in honor of the Kentucky team.

Harvard Not Worried Over Western Plays

If as is often remarked all things are possible, it is possible that Centre College will defeat Harvard on Saturday.

But possibilities never are so good an investment as probabilities, and the probability in the Harvard-Centre

[illegible] that the [illegible] makers [illegible] that [illegible] season will [illegible] the Crimson [illegible] has been [illegible] 1919 defeat of [illegible] there is [illegible] any deviation [illegible] a hedge making [illegible] Harvard [illegible]

Nothing Soft About Harvard These Days

Back in the days before Percy Haughton took the reins at Harvard, the impression was abroad that Harvard fo[illegible] type [illegible] and [illegible] sion still carries [illegible] men of [illegible] fifty second of [illegible] Year's Day game [illegible] fornia—then it carried [illegible]

Harvard teams [illegible] advent [illegible] and Harvard teams [illegible] have given prominence [illegible] among other things, individual stars on opposing football teams constitute [illegible]. It sort of [illegible] two or three men [illegible] have to be watched [illegible] you have to do [illegible] little harder and [illegible] three or four [illegible] once—and they [illegible] pine for a place on the [illegible]

Steers Lived Up to Reputation for a While

"Bad Bill" Steers of Oregon was the great all around backfield star [illegible] Lumbermen [illegible] the [illegible] and "Bad Bill" was living up to his reputation for a while [illegible] test—for a short while [illegible] Bill" wilted. He [illegible] later and once again attempted to be "Bad Bill"—but he wasn't.

Benny Boynton of Williams was a baffling bearcat [illegible] Stadium contest. Not a few had hailed him as the only possible All America quarterback for the [illegible] But in the game with Harvard Benny didn't seem to be doing [illegible] Benny laster through the game, thereby surpassing the record of other individual stars who have cavorted at Cambridge, but Benny's All America

FRESHMEN GET THEIRS TODAY

Yearlings Buffeted by Varsity in Scrimmage Preliminary to Centre Game

The tender young freshmen today were served up to the greedy Harvard varsity football team eager for what promises to be a tougher but more easily digested meal on Saturday with Centre College. The varsity [illegible] taken all the [illegible] out of the [illegible] first team [illegible] given a rest from the [illegible] as it is to play Brown [illegible] tomorrow.

Harvard has heard that McMillin told Virginia students last year by way of identifying himself that he would score more points than their combined team. He did five touchdowns in all. Bo offered to bet 5 to 1—so they say in Cambridge—that he would make more points than Harvard as well as the remainder of his team put together in Saturday's game.

FOOTBALL SONG.

For the Gold and White
We'll fight, fight, fight,
We'll make those line bucks

On every battlefield
You'll see old Centre's shield
And you'll know we're doing well,
We'll shout "Team, Team, Team,
"Keep up the stream, stream,

"Old Centre gives 'em hell."

OUR CENTRE.

Old Centre marches over
On, on to victory and to glory
Loud cheers ring out, huzzas resound
To proclaim the same old story.
Ever bold, as of old
Guard her honor on the field.
Never yield to the foe.
The Gold and White enfold
Our heads we bare

YALE EXPECTS AIR ATTACK

Elis Being Drilled to Stop Open Game Plays of West Virginia

New Haven, Oct. 21.—A long and precise drill in forward passing today and tomorrow is expected to close Yale's preparation for the West Virginia match on Saturday. The game with the mountaineers will probably disclose more aerial heaves than any game ever before played in Yale Bowl.

Yale has been almost helpless in diagnosing these plays and it expects that West Virginia's specialty as proven in her easy victories over Princeton and Washington and Jefferson last year, will furnish the major part of the visitor's attack. This theory was responsible for moving Herbert Kempton from quarterback to halfback and installing Thorne Murphy as field general. The change gives Yale two clever forward passers in the backfield and two of the best defensive players for the forward pass on the Eli squad.

MATMEN READY FOR BIG BOUT

Ajax and Ketonen Confident About Result of Tonight's Bout at Grand

Both Tony Ajax and Waino Ketonen who are to clash tonight at the Grand Opera House are in town ready for battle. Both are trained to the minute and while each is supremely confident of the outcome there is a quiet caution shown by both sides indicating that each man has a lot of respect for the other.

They will go to a finish under championship rules with a preliminary between Oliver Gonet of Woonsocket and George Cooper of Blackstone.

Camel
CIGARETTES

Winston-Salem, N.C. Monday

Dear Petey:

Bet you a house and lot you'd stay in W-S a month if you ever got to know folks here like I have. Between business and Reynolds factories and a belly time—well my date book has been bubbling over! And, I'm still running into facts that would stagger even your imagination, old football, with all your kick!

Pete, take it straight from government figures direct to you that every work day in the week R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. buys from our Uncle Sam enough revenue stamps to pay for a duplicate of the handsome new Winston-Salem post office building! Ever hear of such a thing?

And, if you want to get an eyefull of an army of more than 15,000 people, be down in the Reynolds factory district when the whistles blow! Looks like more folks than you ever saw at a Princeton-Yale football game! Never saw such a cigarette firing-up time in my life!

Peter, everytime you light a Camel in the future, call back on what I've slipped you about Camels—absolutely, the greatest cigarette at any price—for quality, for refreshing flavor, for mellow mild body, for freedom from any unpleasant cigaretty aftertaste or odor! It's worth the busiest smoker's time to compare Camels with any cigarette in the world! Camels are simply a revelation! You know that.

I'll spill you a lot more just as quick as I get a whack at you across the dinner table!

I'll open my eyes in Atlanta tomorrow! In the meantime here's a wad of best wishes I have in stock!

JOHNSON IS STORM CENTRE

Plans Already Under Way to Form 12-Club Organization Next Season

Organized baseball is on the eve of a radical transformation. The recent meeting of baseball magnates in Chicago will probably mark the turning point in the life of the professional game as it is now constituted.

If Ban Johnson [illegible] of the American League [illegible] owners who are [illegible] to make peace with the rest of the big league [illegible] league will [illegible].

This league [illegible] of the present National League [illegible] by Chicago, New York [illegible] of the American [illegible] club added [illegible] tion and [illegible] were made [illegible] in Chicago.

It [illegible] who took [illegible] Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit and St. Louis [illegible] will be the greatest [illegible] the history of the professional game.

PLANS FOR NEW LEAGUE

If the twelve club league [illegible] there will be [illegible] Chicago, Boston and New York [illegible] season will be divided [illegible] halves and [illegible] awarded to the leader at the close of each period.

A post-season series between the winners in each half will be played substituting for the World's Series. If the same club wins in both halfs no series will be played.

Many of the [illegible] from the meeting expressed surprise that the five clubs [illegible] Johnson had not [illegible] while to attend the conference.

"How men who have fortunes invested in this game could afford to remain away from a meeting whose only aim was to safeguard the [illegible] investments in baseball and protect the sport is beyond me," said President Charles Stoneham of the New York Giants.

TO CLEAN UP SPORT

The magnates were insistent that the meeting in Chicago was not directed personally against President Johnson or any one else. "The conference was called for the purpose of cleaning up baseball," said President Stoneham. "It wants a new order of government and we have decided to furnish the sport with safeguards."

Says 200,000 in State Are Golf Enthusiasts

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

B. K. Stephenson, president of the Massachusetts Golf Association, estimated in a talk at the Fred Wright, Jr., Parker Schofield honor feast Wednesday night at the Newton club that 200,000 [illegible] in Massachusetts were interested in golf.

President Stephenson did not [illegible] a guess but made the statement with regard to facts he has been able [illegible] through [illegible] years experience as secretary and as president of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

Albemarle members staged the party in honor of Wright, the State amateur champion, and Schofield, runner-up to Wright and winner of many important open events. Wright and Schofield have won more open tournaments of the Massachusetts Association than all the other members in the State association [illegible]. What a collection of cups and silverware these boys did collect this season.

C. L. Avery, president of Albemarle, introduced F. N. Perkins as toastmaster. Mr. Perkins, recently back from California, stated that golf was gaining in popularity there with the [illegible] as in the East.

Wright and Schofield spoke. The [illegible] was as nervous as a [illegible] with an eight-foot putt for the championship of the world, but if that [illegible] as well as Wright [illegible] he would have dropped it. Out [illegible] a few others Wright allowed [illegible] to insert into the document [illegible] was good enough.

Long before golf [illegible] popular [illegible] in Massachusetts a few fortunate individuals had discovered the [illegible] game and played it with [illegible]. These early disciples never have given [illegible]

By NELL BRINKLEY

O[illegible] where he is? No, you don't, for you say at once, "Of course he's in Paradise," and he is. And that may be equivalent to saying he's the only specimen of attractive man who happens to be found with nothing to do. He's without rivals. Wouldn't you like to be in his shoes? Just think, one lovely creature to play to you—love ditties, naturally—another to offer you bon bons, another to fan you ever so gently, another to bring an iced lemonade, another just to sit and gaze at you? And to add to the completeness of the scene, the young moon hanging in the sky. It may be a dream. If it is, won't it be a cruel disappointment when the sleeper wakes and finds the dream maidens gone? That's the way with everything perfect, but then he can hope it may come true some day. —NELL BRINKLEY.

VARIATIONS—Harley, Flood, Torrens, Herlihy.

SOURCE—A given name

HERE is a group of family names which most anybody might easily take for English. The only one of the five which really sounds as though it were Irish is Herlihy. Yet they are English only in the sense that they are anglicized spellings and derivations of a very old Irish clan name. Not even Flood deserves to be classed as English [illegible] an English word. Though there are some modern families [illegible] Flood [illegible] name [illegible] to [illegible] sources [illegible] to be found in the old English records [illegible] sufficient frequency to have [illegible] other than [illegible] of importation from Erin.

The Irish clan name is "O'h-Urthuile," and was formed from a given name in combination with the "O" (more anciently "Ua"), which signifies "the descendants of" or "the followers of." The "h" sound is inserted in this case only as a means of keeping the prefixed and the initial vowels from slurring into each other. The given name itself is "Urthuile," and has a meaning of "recent flood." If it is remembered that in the Irish pronunciation the "th" is silent, it is not hard to see how "O'h Urthuile" developed into "O Hurley" and "O Harley." Herlihy is simply an attempt to preserve a separate pronunciation of [illegible] in which the syllable [illegible] twisted around [illegible] is common in nearly all languages. Flood and Torrens (torrent) are mere translations.

"I didn't know you knew Burton [illegible]" There was a question in his voice and eyes.

"Oh, dear me," laughed Mellicent, "there are lots of things about me you don't know."

George Trude crossed the room and sat down in a chair by the window, his interest in the girl having been suddenly quickened by the knowledge that some other man found her desirable. George liked Mellicent, but [illegible] he [illegible] imagined that she was [illegible] the type of girl who could [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] social existence in just the manner that would meet with his mother's approval and therefore he had never [illegible] the subject of marriage to her. All men are more or less like sheep. They follow a leader blindly, especially if that leader happens to be a man of Burton's standing. Trude strode across to Mellicent and took her in his arms. "I want [illegible] me. And I don't ever want to hear of Burton's sending you candy. [illegible] promised [illegible] less objectionable expressions.

He avoided her eyes. "That has nothing to do with it. Will you marry me?"

"Sit down [illegible] I don't know whether I shall or not. Excuse me a moment. I have to telephone."

George sank nervously into a chair while Mellicent went into the hall and sat down at the telephone [illegible] he could not see that she kept her forefinger on the hook while she pretended to call the residence of Hathaway Burton. He listened to [illegible]

"Hello, Mr. Burton? This is—but no matter. You wouldn't know my name. A box of candy was left at my home today by messenger. There has been some error, I know, and I am calling in order that the mistake may be satisfactorily adjusted with the little lady who is sweeter than the sweets you meant for her. No indeed, I shall not tell you her name. The candy is lovely. Thanks so much. Goodby."

"So that's it, is it? You don't know Burton at all. I didn't think you did because he's the most discriminating man in town. What was your game—trying to force my hand?"

"Not at all. Remember, I haven't said I'd marry you. I hadn't the slightest intention of doing so, either. I just wanted to prove to you how stupid men really are. You don't want to marry me. You have an idea that I cannot cope with your social world successfully, but because you admire Mr. Burton you would be willing to marry me to show him you have the inside track. Good night, George, and don't come back."

George hesitated. "Won't you forgive me for the things I said just now? I do love you and really want you to be my wife. I'm a fool!"

"You'd weary of a wife who wasn't sufficiently clever to attract men like Mr. Burton. I'm too proud to place myself in a position where your mother can patronize me. This is the end, George."

She watched the door close after him and then sped to the telephone. This time she did not hold her hand over the mouthpiece.

Caught in the Act

"Hello, is this you, Hathaway? Well, it's Mellicent. Your candy came this afternoon—Hush! Not another word like that over the telephone. What will the operator think? I'm alone. Why do you ask? Oh, yes, I did expect him over, but he couldn't come. All right. You may come for an hour. Good bye."

Mellicent turned from the telephone and found herself looking [illegible] into George's eyes.

"I [illegible]" explained. "I [illegible] but I'm glad to have learned in time just [illegible] you are."

"Now that we are both so well acquainted with each other hadn't we better make the best of it? We'll see frequently in the future [illegible] and Mr. Burton would take [illegible] exception to your calling his wife a [illegible] creature."

"[illegible] you can't mean that you are going to marry an impossible egotist?"

How Those Who Commit Unrighteous Acts Must Dearly Pay the Price

By Cosmo Hamilton

UNDER different circumstances there might have been something almost comic in the way in which Mahan sat on the edge of a chair and put his hat under it as though he were in a lecture hall at a Liberty Loan meeting, where he knew that he was going to be called upon not only to empty his banking account, but draw upon his capital. He looked indeed more like a man who was in trouble himself than one who had come to make trouble. "Lovely weather," he began, fidgeting with his fingers.

"Perfect," said Mary. "He's kind, he's kind," she said to herself. "He's suffered and can be trusted."

"If this girl isn't a good little soul, the very sister of all the flowers, I'll eat my hat," thought Mahan, immediately adding, "go easy, you sentimentalist. A pretty face has made a fool of yer before." Between these conflicting thoughts he didn't know how to begin. And there was a strange and peculiar silence, during which Julian and Margaret ventured to look into each other's eyes. They had hoped never to find themselves alone again, anywhere.

"You're almost the first of the big guns of Quaker Hill Colony to see my old barn since I made a studio of it. How do you like it?"

Mahan glanced about him but made no comments. Instead he shot out a sudden question. "How long have you known Gilbert Carlton?"

"For years and years," said Mary. "His sister and I were at the same school, and we all used to meet for the holidays at their father's house at Easthampton. Those were in the good days before I was turned loose on the world. Why do you ask?"

A dozen terse and rather brutal sentences formulated themselves in the mind of Egg-Flip Mahan, who had come with the fixed idea that he was to deal with a light woman, but under the frank and whimsical eyes of the surprising girl who was obviously a worker like himself, they fell into pieces. "Cards on the table," he said impulsively. "Here are mine." And he produced the letter which had burst in his hands like a bomb and put it face upwards in front of her.

"Am I to read it?" asked Mary.

"Yes,—then you'll know why I've come."

Mary picked it up and read it aloud. She wanted the two people who were hiding in her kitchen to hear the indictment. "'Before you consider Gilbert Carlton as the husband of the charming Elsa ask him about the meaning of his friendship with Mary Miller, the girl who swore that she was caught with Julian Osborn at the hotel at Baltimore'—Have you asked him?"

"I had to," said Mahan.

"What did he say?"

"I couldn't tell you all that he said. He is only just out of uniform. Our men who went over have a way of expressing themselves which may not be repeated to girls of your age." For the first time the ebullient and irresistible humor of the gray-haired Irishman showed itself round the corners of his mouth.

Mary laughed. "He's a good soldier," she said, "and although you won't repeat his remarks, I know that I can be grateful for them. All the same, you don't believe him or you wouldn't have come to me."

"A Shrewd Thrust," Said Mahan.

"A shrewd thrust," said Mahan. "I wanted to believe him. But this letter makes an ugly insinuation and I have come to look into it. You can't blame me for that. Elsa is as good as a daughter to me, and when a father is going to give his little girl away in marriage he has to be careful that the man who takes her is fit to have her." His voice broke a little, and he bent his head over so that he might hide the sudden trembling of his lips.

Mary leaned forward and touched his hand with her fingers. "I quite understand," she said. "Your cards are on the table. I will lay all mine out before you."

Mahan looked up and in the eyes which held his own he saw no guile. After all, he thought, Julian's a devilish handsome fellow, and the poor child may have loved him. "Thank you," he said.

"I won't ask you to give me your promise not to repeat anything I am going to say. I believe that's quite unnecessary."

If there was one thing which Mahan liked more than any other it was to be trusted and to be taken on his face value as a man of honor. Many good deals and several bad ones had resulted from this little weakness. He wondered how she knew of it,—this young thing who seemed to be trying to earn a living in a place which he knew to have been occupied not so very long before by the common domestic cow. Was she just a little too shrewd to be as free from trickery as she would have him believe? "A good beginning," he said, dryly.

"I was not caught with Julian Osborn in a hotel at Baltimore," said Mary quietly. "I have never been to Baltimore, and I have only met Julian Osborn twice. It is true that I stood up in court and swore to the fact that I had registered as Mrs. Meredith, but I did it in order to repay Margaret for having saved me from having to become the mistress of a married man."

"You did!"

"Yes, and I'll tell you why. A year ago I was riding in a bus in Fifth Avenue with almost my last dime. I sat next to a girl I'd never seen before. She was beautifully dressed and was as far away from the sort of trouble which dogged my heels as an aeroplane is from a swamp. I don't know why, but she spoke to me, and as she was getting out asked me to go somewhere and have lunch with her. Perhaps she could see that I looked hungry. As we sat over a small table in a restaurant she drew out of me the little story which is so very ordinary and which in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred makes bad women of good girls. When lunch was over—the first lunch I had tasted for quite a number of days,—she walked back with me to my dingy little room and left a check on my table which not only paid all my debts but which made it possible for me to say 'no' to the man who wanted to put me into a place where he could find me waiting for him whenever he chose to come. This was the sort of kindness which sends thanksgiving to the feet of God surrounded with the fragrance of spring flowers, and I shall never forget it as long as I live."

There was another but shorter silence. Julian turned to Margaret, and his lips shaped the words "Who could?" And she gave him a faint little smile but slipped her hand over her heart.

Spoke With Slight Cork Accent

When Mahan spoke it was with the sort of Cork in his accent that only came into it now when he was deeply moved. "It's a moighty good wurruld," he said.

"And then my turn came," continued Mary, steadying her voice. "Like the rest of the people in Quaker Hill you were interested in the action brought by Mrs. Osborn against her husband, in which Mrs. Meredith was named as corespondent. In the middle of the case I offered my services, played the part suggested by the lawyer, and was able with everlasting joy to pay back something of my debt to the woman who had rescued me by sending her home to her husband clothed in chastity. Do you want to know anything more about the girl who is a friend of Gilbert Carlton or why such a friendship should prevent you from agreeing to his marriage to your daughter?"

Mr Mahan sprang up and held out his hand. "Yes," he cried out. "I should like to have the honor of welcoming her to my house and of begging her to give me her friendship."

The two hands closed warmly and for a moment nothing more was said—simply because the Irishman who had struggled with life and won and the little girl who had escaped from the street of adventure without a stain on her skirt were unable to speak. And in the small room behind the partition Julian and Margaret looked at each other once more, aghast. Here was another man to know their already hackneyed secret. How long would it be before some one broke in upon Bob's fool's paradise and shattered his dream?

"If I hurry I can catch the damned train that stops at every station. I've a big day's work before me," said Mahan, and on his way to the door he blew his nose loudly—too loudly. He was something of a comedian.

And when Julian and Margaret came back into the studio they were met by Mary Miller. "It was a certainty," she said, triumphantly. "Worry no more."

"But there's Bob," said Julian.

"And there's Eric," said Margaret.

But once more she forgot to knock wood.

CHAPTER XI.

MR. WILBUR HICKS was in a commuting mood. He had been playing bridge till 3 in the morning. He had just cut himself with a safety razor, which in itself is a paradox, and he had only thirty-one minutes in which to dress, eat his breakfast, be driven a mile and three-quarters to the depot and catch the 8:02 to town. These were shattering circumstances enough. They were made harder to bear because the sun was golden, the trees were deliciously green, and the Quaker Hill bird orchestra was screaming its matutinal chant. If the little lawyer had been silky in his replies to his carefree wife and had worn anything approaching a smile he would have been a freak and an impostor rather than an ordinary human man.

The commuting rasp was in his voice when he opened his bathroom door, put his head over the banisters and called: "Hey, somebody, bring my breakfast up to the sleeping porch and be quick about it."

Mrs. Hicks, who for some reason or other [illegible] married life allowed Wilbur to have his breakfast alone—probably she had read 'Hints to Wives' in the columns of the Ladies' Home Journal—was dressed, her all too vivid peroxide hair had been bundled up in a degage manner; her somewhat massive face had been powdered in a bad light w[illegible] gave her a strange resemblance to a [illegible] wore a silk sweater of a[illegible] aggressive blue. Great and very [illegible] fat-fulness was called upon to [illegible] an acceptable breakfast companion [illegible] most pleasant and leisurely circumstances. Eleven o'clock in the morning on the [illegible] balcony of a charming summer hotel facing a placid sea, yes, if the devil drove. But for a commuter who had cut himself and who had only thirty-one minutes in which to get to the station—

"[illegible] in your dressing gown, Wil," she cried, clearing a round table in the middle of the porch for the breakfast tray which jingled its way upstairs.

"Dressing gown! Do you think I've got time to play the society lap dog? Dressing gown—" The rest of the sentence was luckily lost in the noise of turned-on water.

There followed in inevitable order the usual commuting sounds—the bitter oath at the mischievous d[illegible] of a collar stud, the cry of agony over the broken boot lace, the noise of a shower of collars falling on a tile floor and the yell of "who the what the" because that comb had disappeared, and [illegible] while the remorseless minute hand of the watch performed a marathon behind a bland [illegible].

Hicks Stumped Across Bedroom

Without coat or waistcoat and with a [illegible] piece of cotton wool sticking to his Adam's apple Hicks emerged, stumped sharply across the bedroom and onto the sleeping porch, in which no one slept. "Tea," he snapped, making a dive at the toast dish. "Why not coffee?"

"Well, but yesterday you said—"

"Let me tie it," said Mrs. Hicks, standing broadly on the threshold of that befuddled [illegible]

"Oh, my God!" he said [illegible] tonight, and in remembering [illegible] folly of spoiling his face to spite his [illegible] a bow tie into a sailor's knot. Then once more he sallied forth to [illegible]. But when the tea burned his tongue and [illegible] was found [illegible] how got on the cereal instead of sugar and [illegible] came loudly from below his language could safely be left to the sympathetic imagination of [illegible] to do with commuters. Added to this was that most irritating of all things, the devilish cheerfulness of the woman who had no train to catch. Mrs. Hicks had obviously risen from her couch a happy and contented woman. Her eye was clear, her gold bag bulged with dollars won the night before, and the city was going [illegible]

Mrs. Hicks Went to the Breakfast Table

Mrs. Hicks went back to the breakfast table over which it was her wont to daily [illegible] for at least an hour while she searched the morning papers for suicides and divorces. It gave her a delicious sense of well-being and smoothness to know that her little man was sweating so hard to fill her life with luxuries. That morning, however, she took back with her two [illegible] and Elsa [illegible] After all her endeavors then, these foolish people had committed themselves to intolerable unhappiness. What, she asked herself, was the use of a woman's side-stepping, at great inconvenience, to play the part of benevolence [illegible] thing would? Well, there was many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. She had a black mark against Elsa for a [illegible] often. She would see that even yet things should not run [illegible] Well, [illegible] engagement [illegible] Peterson and that little minx who camouflaged herself [illegible]

And yet, to be strictly fair, the present mode of life has much to do with the making of [illegible] here, for instance, was peroxide Anna, with absolutely nothing to do, because after all no woman dare interfere with the servants, if she is lucky enough to have any, in a house in which there was every conceivable comfort, surrounded by several acres of pleasant garden in which she might not touch the flowers for fear of breaking off relations with the gardener. A hard-working little husband disappeared at an early hour and reappeared in time to dress for dinner. There was the whole day upon her hands, no anxieties as to how to meet the monthly bills, pay the ever-increasing wage list or make daily visits to the village for the purpose of provender, because the telephone had come along to undermine personal energy and effort. A woman in the early forties, healthy, as hard as nails, indeed harder, provided for in every particular not so much through love as owing [illegible] woman be [illegible] had [illegible] of maker [illegible] able hand in [illegible]

System Against These Hicks Women

The system is against these Hicks women; the tyranny of servants assists them, and the fact that it is no longer considered good form for a husband to have a little whip hanging in the hall which he may apply with great benefit from time to time doesn't help things. The whip, on the contrary, is now in the hands of the wife and the result is obvious. It's a mad world, my masters, and greatly in need of reconstruction.

After a brief review of recent events in Quaker Hill and of the trump cards that were in her spatulate hand, the lines went out of Mrs. Hicks' forehead. Singing with a voice which greatly resembled that of Galli-Curci with a severe cold, she did her glistening hair, [illegible] for an hour or two in making long-distance calls to other women in the same dangerous condition and then, like a cubist's idea of an herbaceous border of a rainbow in a very vivid sky, went forth and turned her steps towards the Peterson house there to interview the at present unsuspecting mother of the whimsical [illegible]

The smooth road was smoother than ever. The houses on both sides of it had stood out [illegible] Winter months. If their faces were hard nothing had softened them. At respectful distances from each other there they were behind their leafless screens and nothing could alter the fact. They were the look of men in the most unlovely state of nature waiting for examination by the draft doctor. They were ashamed but resigned. But all that had altered now. Spring had arranged about them her annual camouflage. A corner of roof, an elbow of veranda, a stack of chimneys, a row of upper windows—that was all. Sturdy Italians were cutting the lawns or squirting the bluffed flower beds with [illegible] All the trees were heavy with leaf, even those of the slim silver birches whose branches are so delicate. Here and there the sudden red of a Japanese maple stood out like a Kipling verb in [illegible] over everything and the air shimmered with sunlight. The exquisite quiet was broken only by the [illegible] of birds, the occasional passing of a [illegible] woman's motor and by the intermittent [illegible] of distant carpenters hammering nails into wood. It was a day and a place for love and laughter and kindness.

He had been totally wrong, she was ready to forgive, but it was only right that he should make the first advance. And her heart swollen, longing to be in his arms, she waited for the word she was certain would come.

"Well, we don't have to face that yet," he said heavily; then he stopped; looked at her quickly and said, frowning, "You say you taught him to respect you?"

"Absolutely."

"Yes, but—"

"Come, now; I'm not going to believe that. There is more than you have told me."

Her face betrayed her. Why had she withheld the whole truth, if only not to lose in his eyes? He saw her confusion, and all the happy horde of doubts shrieked once more about him. He put his hand to his throat and then looked away from her.

"Amy, I must know. On your word of honor, is what you have told me the truth?" He hesitated, and added in almost a whisper, as though he too shrank before the test, "All the truth?"

She felt cold in her finger tips, and in the palms of her hands the perspiration rose.

"It is dreadful—I am going to lie; I must lie, there is no other way out," she said to herself, even while calmly and deliberately she answered:

"This young cub means nothing to you?"

"Oh, that—I swear it to you!"

"There is one way to find out," he said quietly. He stepped to the door and rang the bell. Morley appeared. "Send Gregory here."

"What are you going to do?" she cried.

"That is my affair."

"Andrew, you are in my house, before my servants—you won't do anything to humiliate me before them?"

"And I? Haven't I been humiliated before them?" he said sternly. "'Humiliate'—that's good! What do you suppose Gregory thought when he heard that young cub lie to me!"

Before she could protest, Gregory came in, fumbling at the buttons of the duster he had forgotten to change. The butler's agitation fanned Andrew's fury.

Thrills With Admiration

"They know everything. They've already been talking it over! This is what it's come to!" he thought. Aloud he said,

"Gregory, in the future, when Mr. Dawson calls here, whenever it may be, neither Mrs. Forrester nor I are at home. Do you understand?"

"That's all." And as the butler stood glancing from husband to wife, he cried, "Well, why do you stand there? Didn't you hear me? That's all, I said!"

"That clears the atmosphere," said Forrester deliberately.

Amy was in a conflict of two emotions. The further Andrew receded from her control, the more she felt a thrill of admiration at his masterfulness. But this sentiment was immediately brushed aside by the shock to her pride. A servant had been witness of this sudden superiority, which in itself fascinated her. She had received the greatest affront she had ever experienced. In this home, where her whim had been law, suddenly the man had stepped in and shown who was master.

"This I shall never forgive!" she said in a hard voice. In her everything grew cold and rigid, and, all at once, from the weak, passionate longing for his caress of a moment before, she felt a blind, uneasy revolt, a hatred, the same hardening of all her nature that she had been amazed to see in him.

"I am not through," he said, checking her with a gesture. "I shall assume that after what has happened Dawson will not appear at your dance."

"I shall dance with Mr. Dawson," she said slowly.

"I forbid you. Understand me, I forbid you!"

"And I tell you now," she cried, facing him defiantly, "now, after what you've done, I shall dance with Tody Dawson!"

"I think, when you consider calmly," he said sternly, "when you realize what such a defiance will mean—you will do nothing of the kind. What you do outside my house, whom you see, I cannot control; but here in my home—"

"It is my house as much as yours!" she cried, indignantly.

"Quite true; but there is one obligation incumbent on you," he said, sternly, "to see that my dignity is respected. When any man tells me a lie as to the motives of his tete-a-tete with you—he doesn't come in here again."

"Andrew—I warn you, Andrew, I won't accept this," she said, in a choking voice.

"You must take the responsibility of your own decision, then," he said, coldly. He looked at her a moment and drew a clipping from his pocket. "I don't know whether you have read this pleasant reference to us. I have." And he flung on the table the unlucky number of the Tattle-tale.

Start This Story Today You'll Enjoy It

You don't need any synopsis to enjoy reading "Virtuous Wives," by Owen Johnson. Start the story now! It will carry you along with gripping interest. It tells the story most women imagine in their experience. What they would do if their husbands gave them the liberty to "Hang the expense; keep up your end of the social game while I go out and make the necessary money." You husbands, too, follow the story of what happens to Andrew Forrester and his handsome wife, Amy, while breaking into society.

"You don't accuse me—" she began indignantly, when as though the imps of ill chance were determined to overwhelm her with false testimony, for the third time, the telephone broke in. Their nerves were at the snapping tension. The metallic, shrill note was the last irritation to him.

"What—another!" he cried with an [illegible] laugh. "So this is what it's come to!"

His hand went out in blind anger, struck the telephone and swept it from the table. With a crash it went rolling to the floor between [illegible]. She shrank back with a scream, throwing up her arm. He stood breathing hard, his lips working spasmodically. Then, with an effort, he turned and rushed from the room.

VI.

"CAN this be Andrew?" Amy said to herself in amazement. Had the floor suddenly parted and Gregory appeared on extended wings, she could not have been more astonished. For two years she had never known her husband but as the most complaisant and tractable of men, unfailing in good humor, proud of her social triumphs, an inexhaustible bank to meet every caprice. Twenty times she had said to Irma:

"Andrew is the most perfect of husbands. He lets me do exactly what I want. He has absolute faith in me. Really, I think he adores it, the more men are attentive to me."

And, all at once, without warning, this outburst, this arbitrary and violent edict of Dawson's banishment! She who had looked at other wives in superior pride had suddenly been overwhelmed with the ugly reality. The first quarrel had come, and with it the realization that here was a new man—very different from the adoring Andrew of the past, a will and a temper to be reckoned with in future, an anger that had left her cold with physical [illegible].

She stooped and picked up Dawson's card, now twisted into an unrecognizable [illegible], and the copy of the Tattle-tale which he had flung down. Then, noticing the telephone, she swept it up hastily. But no sooner had she replaced the receiver, than the bell took up its shrill clamoring.

For the moment, she was seized with the same violent desire to sweep it aside which had possessed her husband.

"Well, who is it?" she demanded angrily.

It was Tody Dawson.

"Mrs. Forrester is out!" she said abruptly, and set the receiver down with a bang. Of course, he had telephoned to warn her of his break, but the boyish imprudence of the move increased her irritation.

"The worst is, I acted as though I were guilty," she thought, as she entered her boudoir. Her cheeks were burning with a dry, feverish anger. She repeated insistently, "No, never—I'll never forgive him!"

Her husband's room adjoined hers. She marched directly to the door, threw it open, and said sharply,

"Andrew!"

The room was empty. He had left the house. She came back, frowning and uneasy, vaguely alarmed at this disappearance, which her excited imagination magnified. What could she do? There must be some explanation. Matters could not be left like this. She dressed, glanced at the clock and hurried down to the waiting [illegible].

Yet it was impossible to forgive such a public humiliation—quite impossible! Then her anger veered to Tody. What had possessed him to tell such a stupid lie—to call up on the telephone, when her husband might have been there? Perhaps Andrew had overheard; there was a connection in his room; perhaps that was why he had rushed away. Of course, if he was jealous, it did look terribly, with all those unfortunate telephone calls. Suddenly she sat upright.

"But Andrew himself told me to play all I wanted to—of course he did! And now he reproaches me!"

Thrown Off Her Guard

Why hadn't she thought of that at the time of their quarrel? There was her answer—to him and to all the doubts which had troubled her conscience. She had done only what he had wished her to do. If she had unwittingly offended against appearances, he was responsible. Her innocence appeared to her so radiantly clear that she settled back with a deep sigh of content. When she saw him again, she would confront him with this defence. What could he answer? Absolutely nothing! So relieved was her conviction that by the time she reached Lazare's she was in no mood to make excuses for what she had sworn never to forgive.

It was almost two by the buhl clock hid in the palms as she hurried through the antechamber [illegible] was [illegible] she began [illegible]

She was [illegible] right and to the [illegible] which was always [illegible] social group. Gladys [illegible] and malicious. It would never [illegible] suspect the quarrel. She was composing her expression when all at once she was thrown off her guard. At their table, where they had drawn up chairs for a word of greeting, she saw her cousin, Fifi Nordstrum, and Monte Bracken.

She had known that he was returned from Europe. She had read of his exploits lately at Palm Beach, but in the long intervals since she had last seen him, the impression of their last intimate conversation had remained so vivid that [illegible] him now in this odd conjecture startled her.

He arose at her approach. By the look in his eyes she saw that he did not at once recognize her, until, by Fifi's greeting, he could place her.

"Sorry to be late—husband turned up," she said lightly. "Why, Fifi dear, thought you were in Florida!"

[illegible]

"Rats!" said Fifi. "There are thousands like you, Gladys."

"But what's he been saying?" said Irma encouragingly.

"The most dastardly attack I could make," said Bracken smiling. "If I had accused you of being uneducated parasites, or immoral, that would be nothing! But I remarked that the New York woman did not know how to dress and the row started."

"But Monte even admits that we are the best dressed women in the world," said Irma in protest.

"Oh, go on and attack us!" said Kitty.

"With pleasure. You dress for the street car as you dress for a ball. There is nothing progressive in your art, everything is thrown out at once. A well-bred woman in Europe who is well dressed is an artist. When she goes shopping she goes shopping, and not to attract the admiration of motormen, bell boys and shop clerks. She would [illegible] such attention. So she dresses not to be noticed. If she lunches in a restaurant, she does not offer herself to the vulgar stare of a crowd as she would to her friends in the shelter of her home."

"This hits me!" said Kitty.

"Certainly. But it does not distinguish you, my dear Kitty," said Bracken, laughing.

"Well, we overdress," said Gladys, shrugging her shoulders.

"Ah, but it's more than that. You don't comprehend that to be a woman is an art in itself!"

"Now you interest me," said Irma, nodding in approval, while each in turn at this excursion into the only field which completely absorbed [illegible]

"To charm always and unfailingly, a woman must understand the value of surprises. She should know how to admit a [illegible] to her [illegible] and to make [illegible] each approaching step a privilege."

"Blessed if I get that!" said Kitty explosively, while Irma nodded thoughtfully.

OILS AND STEELS ARE LEADERS

Most Rails Show Gains; Motors, Sugars and Coppers Quiet; Tractions Active

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were up in New York at noon, but prices ruled below the best level of the morning. Oils and steels were the leaders of the upward movement, and while most rails showed gains there were a number in the recessional list. St. Louis Southwestern was the feature among carriers. It advanced more than two points. New York, Chicago & St. Louis sold at a new high for the year. Reading issues were rather weak. Among strongest stocks were Mexican Petroleum, Crucible, Colorado Southern and Pittsburgh Coal.

The market was fairly active, first hour transactions totaling 128,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange was steady, opening rates being: demand sterling $3.44⅞, up ⅛ cent; francs .0650, up .0002; lire .0377, off .0001; marks .0141, off .0002.

START STEADY AND ADVANCE.

While the market was irregular at the opening, gains outnumbered losses and the list was steady. Advances became general within a few minutes and strength prevailed in most departments. Oils, steels and rails continued to lead in activity, but there was more business in public utilities than usual. Motors, sugars, tobaccos and coppers were quiet. Paper issues were weak. Fluctuations were small as a rule. There was no change over night in conditions affecting speculation. The short interest is heavy but it has been found this week that stocks are easily absorbed. The foreign situation has depressed valuations less than forecasters expected, but British affairs at present are calculated to promote caution in stock market operations, although reports from across the Atlantic encourage hopes of a settlement before long of the labor difficulty.

AWAITING RAIL REPORTS.

While rails are not quite as active as they were at the beginning of the month, they are inspiring no less interest. One dispatch from New York received this morning read: "The tone was strong and there was a general disposition to buy at the levels established during the past few days. Offerings were extremely scant, however, and it was apparent that there is no opportunity to accumulate any substantial line of stocks around current positions. On account of this those concerned on the long side were disposed to proceed in a quiet manner for a time, some of them believing it most advisable to wait for the publication of the first railroad earnings for the month of September."

COPPER PRODUCERS RETIRE FROM MARKET

It is said that large copper producers are unwilling to cut prices further and are virtually out of the market. Only one is reported as willing to sell at 16½ cents a pound. Business at a much lower price has been reported this week. Small selling interests are offering metal at 16½ cents at for December delivery. Consumers expect further reductions and are confining purchases to immediate needs.

In the copper trade it is believed that a large proportion of the 80,000,000 pounds sold to the Orient this year has been resold and reshipped and found its way to Europe to be offered in competition with metal forwarded directly from this country.

Cuba Wants $100,000,000

Cuba is seeking to borrow $100,000,000 from American banking interests. Half of the amount it wanted because of the failure to sell all of last season's sugar and the other $50,000,000 to finance next season's production. Banking interests are understood to be of the opinion that Cuba can get along with a loan of $20,000,000 and that $50,000,000 is needed at the most.

COPPERS QUIET IN BOSTON

Several Make Gains, While Others Sell at New Lows; Curb Irregular

Prices ruled higher on the Boston exchange at the opening, although a large number of issues were unchanged on first sales. The tone was good in most parts of the list and it improved. The market became strong very soon and was a little more active at the outset than usual. Utah Apex was an early feature. It advanced more than a point and sold at its high for 1920 to date. Highs for the period were attained also by New England Telephone and Edison, while Osceola and Calumet and Hecla sold at the lowest prices recorded for them in years. Calumet and Hecla dropped to 245. Coppers were quiet, but a number showed gains. Packing issues were steady. Rails were neglected in this market.

Among issues to advance a point were New England Telephone and American Woolen preferred. U. S. Smelting was credited by the tape with 2¼ loss on the first sale, but was only off a point on the second transaction.

Fractional gains were made by Boston Elevated, Carson Hill, Eastern Manufacturing, Swift and Co., Seneca, St. Mary's Land, New Cornelia, Waldorf and Edison. Among issues to show small losses were American Telephone, Island Creek, Old Dominion, Quincy, Swift International and Superior and Boston.

CURB MARKET IS DULL.

The Curb market was less active this morning, and, after a dull opening, remained listless. But it had a good tone, the movement being upward. Early leaders were Crystal, Boston & Montana, Hecla Divide, Merrimac Development and Mutual. Among issues to advance at the start were Arizona Tip Top, Crystal, Merrimac Development, Palisade and National Zinc. Weak stocks were Allied Mining, Arizona Silver, Mutual and Chief.

At the end of an hour Crystal was up 2 cents at 43 cents, Palisade 6 cents at 15 cents, Pilgrim 2 cents at 10 cents and Seven Metals 2 cents at 9 cents. Losses included Mutual 7 cents at 29 cents and Albany Divide 4 cents at 63 cents. Merrimac Development and Tip Top had lost their gains and Allied Mining had recovered.

Are Railroad Stocks Selling Too High?
Ever since the increased freight rates went into effect, the rails listed on the New York Stock Exchange have been advancing, and many people are wondering how much further they will go.
This is an interesting question, and its answer is governed by the ability of the roads as a whole to operate profitably under existing conditions. And the outlook in this connection is summed up in an article appearing in our Market Review
In addition to covering the railroad situation, the current issue of this publication, which will be sent free upon request, contains a complete analysis of the following roads:
Pittsburgh & West Virginia
St. Louis-San Francisco
Chesapeake & Ohio

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 21.—The cotton market opened steadier today at a decline of 11 to 40 points, owing to weak cables, unfavorable private reports as to prospects of a quick settlement of the British coal strike and fresh weakness in cotton goods. Liverpool, the South and local interests sold. There was a fair amount of buying by the trade on the scale down and also a scattered covering, but this demand failed to hold prices which sold down to a basis of 19c. for December by the end of fifteen minutes. Opening prices were: [illegible] 19.10; December, 19.15; January, 19.07; March, 19.10; May, 19.03.

National Biscuit Co. declared quarterly 1¾ per cent. on common, payable Jan. 15, to stock of record Dec. 31, and also quarterly 1¾ per cent. on preferred, payable Nov. 30 to holders of record Nov. 16.

An initial dividend of $3 a share, payable Nov. 5 to holders of record Oct. 30 was declared by Philadelphia Insulated Wire Co. The dividend is for the six months ended Sept. 30.

Rail Earnings

The August gross revenue of Kansas City Southern was a comparative increase of $455,161 and during that month its operating deficit decreased $478,595. Its gain since Jan. 1 was $3,053,079 in gross and $443,805 in operating income.

Canadian Pacific's gross increased $1,660,000 in the second week of Oct. and for the year to the middle of this month the increase was $26,959,000.

SUGAR AT BOTTOM, REFINERS THINK

The advance in the wholesale price of refined sugar to 12 cents a pound is regarded as an indication that refiners think the price for the commodity has touched bottom. More evidence of this sort, it is believed, is the re-entrance of the American Sugar Company, the largest refiner of all, into the market.

The Revere Sugar Refinery, which is under United Fruit ownership, is not following other refiners. After quoting 11 cents, less 2 per cent., for refined sugar it has ceased taking orders and virtually withdrawn from the market.

Rail Needs of One Road

Inquiries by the Chicago & Northwestern indicate that in 1921 that road will buy 40,000 tons of steel rails. Deliveries will begin in January.

Pennsylvania Stockholders

It is claimed that different interpretations of the act are given by Federal Enforcement Agent Witcher and other authorities. The cidermakers, numbering about 100, claim that their business is threatened with destruction if Whitcher's views are correct.

WITH THE AIR MEN

By C. W. JACOBY.

Formerly of U. S. Air Service.

* * *

A BIRD'S-EYE view map of Washington and surrounding country will be made as the result of aerial trips from Bolling Field now being made by representatives of the company. This company has been asked by the Army Air Service to undertake the construction of a series of detailed maps showing the territory in certain parts of the country. These maps will pave the way for larger ventures into the map-making field by government agencies interested in the commercial development of the airplane.

* * *

THE Ohio Flying School and Transport Company's first plane in a flight from Toronto to Akron has the distinction of being the first to pass through the recently inaugurated U. S. Aerial Customs.

* * *

ITALIAN airplane manufacturers, in an attempt to popularize flying, are turning out a number of midget airplanes. One of these, the Pensuti, at the races at Milan, made a wonderful performance. This plane took first honors for quickness of "take-off," for "pull-up" and controllability on the ground. It is a triplane of thirteen-foot span and it is powered with a 35-H. P. six cylinder engine. One of its structural features, increasing safety in landing, is the placing of the two landing wheels near the tips of the lower planes.

* * *

TEN armored triplanes will be built for the United States government by a Seattle company, construction starting at once with the first delivery scheduled in November, and other machines following rapidly before the end of the year. These planes, representing a new type of construction, are designed to serve in aerial work for ground attack, having a function similar to that of tanks on land. They have been characterized as "flying tanks." Quarter-inch armor plate protects the fuselage and nacelles. The armament includes a thirty-seven millimeter rapid-fire gun mounted on front, four machine guns trained to fire through the floor, two machine guns at the back and two above the wings.

* * *

FIGURES reported for the first year of civil flying in England reveal a total air mileage of 734,200 made in 35,954 flights, carrying 70,000 passengers with but one fatal accident. Machines numbering 519 were registered.

* * *

THE Chinese government is contemplating the establishment of an aerial mail service between Pekin, Hanhow and Shanghai. It is estimated that 100 airplanes would be required for this service, and British, French and Italian manufacturers are already on the ground ready to book orders.

* * *

EVERY day brings new and important developments in commercial aeronautics. Among these the most important has been the award of aerial mail carrying contracts during the past months. A recent announcement states that contracts for three new air mail routes at a cost of $685,000 a year were awarded by the post-office department to the Lawson Airline Company of Chicago.

* * *

THE contracts call for airplane mail service from Pittsburgh to St. Louis by way of Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, at a cost of $147,000 a year; between New York and Chicago, via Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Fort Wayne, Ind., for $238,000 a year, and for service between New York and Atlanta, via Washington, Raleigh, N. C., and Columbia, S. C., at a cost of $300,000.

* * *

ONE of the largest lumber firms, whose timber limits cover an area of more than 5,000 square miles scattered throughout the eastern part of the Province of Quebec, has secured seaplanes to act as patrols and obtain aerial photographs. This air service will be staffed entirely with officers of the Royal Flying Corps.

* * *

ALL the newspapers in Berlin, Germany, give prominence to a statement made by Herr Colsmann, head of the famous Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshaven, that, as a result of his visit to the United States, whence he has just returned, prospects for the establishment of a regular airship service between Germany and America are very bright. The management of the Zeppelin factories say that their latest type of airship would be able to transport 500 passengers with heavy luggage from Hamburg to New York in forty-five hours.

* * *

AIRPLANES engaged in forest patrol work, operating from the Mather Field base, located seventeen of the nineteen fires reported in the district from July 16 to 31, according to the report of the Forest Service. Of these seventeen fires, fifteen were perfectly reported by the aerial observers. Nine of the blazes were detected first by airplanes, and the other eight were first discovered by Forest Service patrols. Eleven of the seventeen conflagrations were reported by radio, with which all planes used for patrol duty are equipped.

* * *

IT is reported from Washington that when Congress re-convenes aircraft manufacturers will apply to Congress for the granting of permission for private airplane concerns to utilize certain German patents that are considered indispensable to progress in designs which have been turned over to the War Department by the Allen Property Custodian. The manufacturers say that these patents will advance commercial construction by 100 per cent.

MISS DASEY HOME FROM NEAR EAST RELIEF WORK

"The Easterners believe we Americans can do anything, and it wouldn't do to fall short of the mark," said Miss Miriam K. Dasey of Brookline, who returned today from Asia Minor, where she travelled from one end to the other in a freight car. She served as hostess in the Near East relief, Constantinople.

"I met the confidential adviser of the Nationalist leader, Mme. Hadile Hamin," said Miss Dasey. "She is a most interesting woman, and after meeting her one may not wonder at the success of the Nationalists with such a woman to scheme for them. She combines the wile of the East with the ability and assertiveness of the West. She demonstrates that the Oriental woman is no longer the petted or abused creature of the harem." Miss Dasey declared that the Turkish Nationalist party is doomed.

PHONE OPERATOR HELD IN $100,000 GEM THEFT

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 21.—John McCullough, night telephone operator at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club, was taken into custody by detectives today. It is believed that he is under questioning in connection with the $100,000 jewelry robbery at the club two weeks ago.

McCullough was operating a switchboard within ten feet of the pillar by which the thieves climbed into the apartment of the guests from whom the jewels were stolen. He has been under surveillance for the past four days.

MRS. MARY E. G. HOLDEN BURIED AT CALVARY

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Good Holden, aged 69, born in Roxbury and a lifelong resident of the district, was held from her home, No. 66 Centre street. Burial was in New Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Holden was the daughter of the late Captain John F. Good, who was killed in the Civil War. She leaves a husband, Oscar Holden; a son, George W., former master of Deer Island, and four daughters, the Misses Lillian H., Josephine A., Catherine B. and Mrs. Mary E. Murphy.

A 'Wilson' Not a Democratic Party

Democratic Voters Will Swamp the "Wilson Party," Its Fads and Fancies

You hear it said, "It is difficult to find a man who says that he will vote for the national Democratic party this year."

The statement is not clear unless you add "because there ISN'T any national Democratic party this year."

There is a "Wilson party," and there is an assortment of foreign Wilson principles, concocted abroad, instilled into Mr. Wilson and brought back here to be foisted upon this country.

Democrats are not leaving the Democratic party. They are simply recognizing the fact that for 1920 there ISN'T ANY Democratic party. Democrats that will vote the Republican ticket will not vote for the Republican party, they will vote "against" the Wilson party, "against" the Wilson League of Nations. To do that they must vote Republican, much as they dislike it.

This election has nothing to do with the Democratic party. It has to do with a preposterous War League of Nations that would be an apology for our war in 1776, and a throwing away of the independence gained in 1776.

Millions of Democrats, like this newspaper, have in no way changed their attitude toward the Democratic party. They, like the Hearst newspapers, are opposed to Wilson policies, and to the Wilson party, but are in favor of the policies of Jefferson and a genuinely Democratic party.

The Democratic party must be made democratic, and it must be made safe for Democrats. This can only be done by destroying first the Wilson party and then the heirs to the Wilson party principles.

There is no connection between the Democratic party and the imperialistic pro-British party headed by Mr. Wilson and dragging the British League of Nations with it.

The house of democracy has been invaded by European interests, and in 1920 there is no Democratic party to vote for and there are no national Democratic candidates to be elected.

That is the story.

Democrats are not going to vote against the Democratic party. They are going to vote against the Wilson party, in order to restore the Democratic party.

When a man returns to his home and finds it in the possession of burglars, he joins the police in an effort to put them out. This is not siding against his own home, but siding against the burglars.

The Democratic party has been burglarized, and at this election the burglars are to be put out. Then the Democratic party will go on as it has been for many years, clear of the League of Nations handicap, and clear of the saloon handicap that this 1920 Wilson party would fasten upon it.

Hail! "Praying Colonels" From the Blue Grass

The football game in the Stadium on Saturday will be no ordinary middle of the season contest.

Forty thousand persons are expected to witness a contest between great Harvard, with thousands of students to choose an eleven from, and little Centre, a Kentucky school with an enrollment of 250.

But Centre has not been beaten since 1917. Centre's captain is Alvin "Bo" McMillan, the All-America quarterback. Centre boasts James "Red" Weaver of Fort Worth, All-America centre. And, if you know football, you also have heard of "Red" Roberts and Hall Snoddy.

Centre College, at Danville in Boyle County, has turned out twenty-six college presidents, eight United States senators and thirty-seven members of Congress, but gets its national fame from football.

Danville is a great "horse" centre. There also is some politics there, especially at this time of year and most particularly this year. But there will be almost as much of Danville in the Stadium on Saturday as is left behind in Danville. Centre WANTS this game against mighty Harvard—wants it with SUCH a want that it is bringing five full elevens—and 700 Danville folk are coming with the boys on a special train to see the thing done. President Ganfield is on that train, and the bank president, and several clergymen. The Hotel Gilcher will be a lonesome spot; Check Field will be deserted. Every town in the Blue Grass will get the news, play by play, by special wire.

The men of the Centre eleven are sometimes called the "Golden Tornadoes" and again the "Praying Colonels." Stories that they have prayed before important contests are true. But, as Dr. Ganfield points out—and the president of Centre has led some of these prayer meetings—"the boys do not PRAY to WIN; they PLAY to win and pray to PLAY THEIR BEST."

The special from Danville is due to arrive in Boston at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. It will be parked in the railroad yard and most of the "folks" will "hotel" in the cars. Centre last Saturday mopped up the earth with Transylvania College, of Lexington, 55—0. "Bo" McMillan's men are not going to meet a Transylvania THIS Saturday, but probably a big part of the great crowd in the Stadium will root for the little college in the Blue Grass. Make the visitors feel at home.

Automobile Laws Should Be Better Enforced

Automobilists are still careless about the use of headlights; about obedience to the speed regulations and about keeping on the right side of the street. The motorcyclists are especially lawless concerning reasonable speeding.

All these untoward conditions of automobiling have naturally resulted in the increased harvest of death which has been recorded during the last week.

A more vigorous enforcement of the law and a more severe punishment for its breach would be wholesome. The suspension for a considerable period of the license of a driver who has violated the law would be wholesome if it were followed up by some method of observing whether or not he continued to operate a car without a license.

F. OPPER

Our hero's bride and the fourteen children take entire charge of his campaign. The lady now wears the trousers. She organizes a grand parade, with herself as the General. Our hero is assigned to carry the water pail. The serried ranks took quite some time, or even longer, to pass a given point. Then they marched around again. Ah, well, we can't all be generals. Still, it's kinda tough to bring up the rear just when you——

More Truth Than Poetry

"Some Day"

By S. E. KISER

YOU just wait! I'm going to cause
When I'm receiving loud applause
  They'll wish they had been wise before.
These birds who think, because they've had
  A run of luck, they must be great
Will see the day when they'll be glad
  To claim my notice—you just wait!

I'M going to write a song, some day,
  To make me rich and bring me fame,
Or else turn out a book or play,
  Or learn to beat the Wall Street game.
I don't know just exactly how,
  But some day I will turn the trick,
And sneer at those who shun me now—

IT may be something I'll invent,
  Or some discovery I'll make;
I'll cause some people to repent
  The present snobbish course they take.
Some time, when stocks are low, I'll buy,
  And then sit back and watch my chance
To win by selling when they're high;
  You wait! I'm not in any trance.

I HAVEN'T quite decided yet
  Just how I'll win my great success,
But some day I'll be out of debt
  And lose my present weariness.
So let them sneer and let them strut,
  I'll strike the right thing, soon or late;
You think I'm merely dreaming—but
  I'll show you some day—you just wait!

PERISH THE THOUGHT

A good many people are beginning to suspect that we went to war to make the world safe for British commerce.

GOING DOWN

More than 50 per cent. of the people of the United States now live in cities. The importance of the farmer vote may eventually become so slight that it will not be necessary for the political parties to pick their candidates from the villages.

Edison Seeking Spirit World

THOMAS A. EDISON, the foremost inventor of modern times, is endeavoring to perfect an apparatus which will make it possible to record messages from the spirit world—if there are any spirits who desire to communicate with us. It is his belief that only through some specially constructed scientific instrument will a message ever come from the realms of the dead, and that it will be from the spirit of some dead scientist—a wireless expert or physicist.

Mr. Edison is perfecting his "spirit wireless" at his laboratories in Orange, N. J. If successful, it will mark a new epoch in the history of mankind. It will settle for all time the question of the soul's immortality. The story of Mr. Edison's experiments, together with his ideas on the subject of spirit life, appear in the Magazine Section of Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Professor Farabee, of the University of Pennsylvania, has returned from South America with a tale of $300,000,000 in pure gold hidden in mountain caves. Part of this treasure he brought back with him in the form of idols and ornaments which he discovered in the places where they were hidden by Indians centuries ago.

Read the true story of the treasures of the Incas in the Magazine Section on Sunday.

Miss Mary Augusta Barney was in no hurry to marry, for she knew the right man would come along in time. She waited seventy-two years for him, and then he appeared—Dr. Andrew Malcolm Morrison—aged 100 years. They have just been married in Los Angeles.

The "blushing bride," with the advantage of seventy-two years of spinsterhood, comments keenly on the modern woman, her morals, dress and outlook on life. The groom, who certainly should know, gives practical advice on how to live a full century. Read their stories Sunday in the Magazine Section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The concluding instalment of the Hope Diamond Mystery, by May Yohe (Lady Francis Hope) appears Sunday.

AND ANOTHER day.

I'M GOING to write a play.

"As They Shot"

And Some Things in General

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

Josephus Daniels says truly that men recently in the army will vote as they shot. They shot for the United States, they will vote for the United States, and vote to keep the United States out of any European League of Nations entanglement.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of 1,000 soldiers will tell you they are against the League of Nations scheme to let a foreign council conscript them back into the army.

This is not too complicated for our Western intelligence. Suppose the new Emperor should object to Chinese rule by Japanese cunning? Suppose China and Japan went to war, and the League of Nations Council, siding with Japan, ordered the United States to supply men and money to Japan for use against China, how would that impress you?

It is not at all a vague question, for Mr. Wilson has said that under such circumstances this country "would be under an absolutely compelling moral obligation" to go and do the Japanese's fighting for them. Would that please you? Would the average American, in California for instance, enjoy being conscripted to fight for Japan, against the Chinese?

A wise, useful suggestion comes from Herbert Hoover, in his plan mapping out "a program for American children." Mr. Hoover's suggestion that at least one meal a day in the schools be given to children that need it, and his other suggestion for helping children at government expense in every stage, from birth to maturity, will have the support of every intelligent American. Childhood is the country's one great asset. And the great national joke is the fact that the country spends more money helping farmers to raise young pigs and chickens, which have a cash value for their meat, than it does helping American mothers to raise children, whose meat has no cash value, but whose brains must make the nation whatever it is destined to be.

This glorious Administration, with its love of democracy and sweet peace in Europe, appears to have been a little free and easy when it came to killing natives in Haiti. "Practically indiscriminate killing," the report calls it. Three thousand two hundred and fifty stretched out dead in the name of American liberty appears to be a very respectable "bag."

Recently the cry was, "Food will win the war. Save it." Now you have the "eat more bread" club. And the bread is white bread—a pleasant change. You notice other similar changes. Mr. Harding says that "He kept us out of war" now reads "He kept us out of peace." It used to be "buy a bond." Now the difficulty is to sell a bond within twenty dollars of what you paid for it.

Soft coal, it is said, will show the next price decline. You can scarcely blame the coal profiteers, for the government, fixing asinine prices on a basis of preposterously high profits, openly invited the profiteering. The cost of producing the coal has had nothing to do with its sale price. That depended on bidding by speculators.

Coal that used to sell at the mine for fifty cents a ton now sells as high as $15 and $18. That really is profiteering, and the government, that ought long ago to have put those responsible in jail, is still weeping its foolish eyes out about the troubles of Mesopotamia and the boundaries of Czecho-Slovakia.

The Prince of Wales is home, "much worn by his tour" through the empire. He seemed pale and thin to the crowd and is said to have had three "breakdowns" on his trip. He travelled on a private battleship with a very large, comfortable room, and on private cars, surrounded always by servants and sycophants. If that gave him three "breakdowns" his friends would do well to veto the suggestion that he be sent now to govern Ireland.

---

It would make Italian industry independent of England's coal mines, and thus make Italy independent of England. It would help to restore the value of Italian exchange and give to Italy the immediate prosperity that she well deserves.

One day, perhaps, Italy will find all the heat and power needed in the depths of Vesuvius. Meanwhile, oil from below ground comes as welcome as Moses' water from the rock.

Speculators are delighted, investors dream golden dreams, American credits for new factories and homes are ruined by the numerous offerings of foreign bonds paying 8 per cent. interest sold at par or lower, with a generous "rake off" for bankers, and redeemable at 110.

By and by will come a less pleasant chapter. Some one of these foreign issues will default on interest payment. The others, good or bad, will suffer, quotations will drop. Eight per cent. interest, with a dash of "Ponzi" in it, loses its charm when you learn Ponzi's method. Before the 8 per cent. investments are all swallowed some Americans will wish they had kept their money working in the United States. Here also it is needed.
